

Washington—Having taken note of the current world situation, the President has started to present his case to the American people.

While it is too early to appraise clearly his analysis and recommendations, I am convinced that the people are entitled to know what the Administration thinks and what steps are necessary to know what the Administration thinks and what steps are necessary to get out of our dilemma. To that extent I believe the President is right in taking the problem to the people. I am thoroughly in accord with his desire for strong defense. I only wish he had not waited until now to take up this urgent business which is so important to our survival as a free people.

Defense First

Before the full thesis of his program is known we will have to wait until his so-called pep talks to the country are completed. We will also require a careful enunciation of his recommendations to the Congress. The general interpretation of the Eisenhower approach thus far is that there will be "more defense and less butter" for the United States. The President says he wants some less urgent programs reduced, eliminated or postponed in order to accommodate the increased spending for defense.

This is where the rub comes. Now the promotion begins by the White House to put across their programs which may run counter to what the Congress and the people think. There is already a big build-up for foreign aid, indicating that this program will get priority by the Administration. There are rumors that such things as programs for farmers and veterans may be sacrificed by the White House. Should Congress fail to go along with the White House, undoubtedly this will result in a bitter political controversy over the budget.

Why cannot this be avoided? Is it not reasonable to expect that strong defense and bold new approaches in science may require such increased expenditures that a tax increase will result? Certainly nobody wants a tax increase; most people I know strongly advocate economy. Yet it is difficult to cut out such activities as the farm program and veterans benefits for I feel such programs are just as vital as foreign aid and are closely tied in with the strength and vitality of our democracy. There are those who disagree and would eliminate these and at the same time continue subsidies to many other facets of our population.

Perhaps it boils down to the fact that everyone will have to do a little giving on this score. The Administration will have to explain in exact terms why it must have this and so, and the Congress will have to work harder to see wherein economies can be made. I do hope this will come about without too much delay and that our country's defenses will be shored up as fast as humanly possible.

I am glad that the President has made a beginning on this program. His appointment of Dr. Killian as Assistant for Science and Technology is a beneficial step.

Good Man

Former Governor John S. Battle of Virginia is a man of great integrity, ability and one who understands the problems which face the South today. I served with him on the Platform Committee at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago. He will make a dedicated member of the new Civil Rights Commission. I am not personally acquainted with the other members of the group.

Vehicle Responsibility Act Effective Jan. 1st furnishes you with the certificate.

Question: What kind of insurance is required?

Answer: An owner's liability policy which provides insurance for damages to persons or to property caused by your motor vehicle and for which you are legally obligated to pay. Collision and comprehensive insurance, covering damages to your own vehicle, does not meet the requirement of the law.

Question: How much insurance is required?

Answer: The minimum policy provides $5,000 damage for the bodily injury or death of one person, $10,000 for the bodily injury or death of two or more persons, and $5,000 for damage to property.

Question: Where can such insurance be obtained?

Answer: Through insurance companies and insurance agents licensed to do business in North Carolina. If you do not have insurance, you should make your own arrangements immediately, as it will take some time for insurance companies to process applications.

Question: Can every automobile owner by this insurance?

Answer: Yes. There is a special part of the new law called "the assigned risk plan" which makes it possible for those hitherto unable to obtain liability insurance to get it after January 1.

Question: How much will it cost?

Answer: The cost of your policy depends upon a number of things, including your driving record, the number and ages of the people who drive your car, your place of residence and your occupation. For those with a bad accident record who must secure their insurance under the assigned risk plan, the cost will be more than the cost to drivers with safe records.

Question: What happens if my insurance lapses, or is cancelled?

Answer: If there is a lapse in your insurance by cancellation of your policy or your failure to renew it, the law says (1) that the insurance company must notify the State Department of Motor Vehicles and (2) you must immediately surrender your motor vehicle license plate and registration certificate.

Question: Is there any notice of cancellation?

Answer: Yes, your insurance company must give fifteen days notice of termination of your policy. The company also must notify the Department of Motor Vehicles if your policy is terminated for any reason whatsoever. You then must purchase new insurance or surrender your license plate. If you don't, they will be seized and you will be held in violation of the law.

Question: What about a used car for which a 1958 plate has been issued?

Answer: The purchaser cannot legally operate it or retain the plate unless he obtains a certificate of insurance (FS-1) or otherwise complies with the law. The Form FS-1 must be presented with the application for the transfer of the license and unless this is done the license plate must be surrendered.

Question: What penalties does

NO SOUR GRAPES—Wine goes to the head of 13-year-old Gizella Balasz, who escaped from Hungary during the Red purge to make a new life in the United States. Now in Sonoma, Calif., she has fun balancing a bottle of wine on her head during a vintage festival.

Answer: Those violating the law will be prosecuted in the courts. The violation includes a failure to surrender a license plate which has been revoked. Falsification of any documents in connection with the law subjects one to severe penalties.

Question: Are all motor vehicles required to be covered?

Answer: Yes. All self-propelled motor vehicles subject to registration, except vehicles owned by the various branches of the government, and those owned by common and contract carriers who are required to furnish evidence of financial responsibility under another law, come under this act. Trailers are not under the law.

Question: Why did the Legislature pass this law?

Answer: The Vehicle Responsibility Act—the real name of the so-called Compulsory Insurance Law—was passed to protect you and members of your family from damage at the hand of an uninsured and financially irresponsible motorist. In states where similar laws have been in effect, the general public seems to like the plan. At least, no such law has ever been repealed.

SUNLAY SCHOOL LESSON

with this letter of thanksgiving and joy. In it, Paul took the opportunity to reveal many of his personal thoughts; to exhort the Philippians to love, joy, humility and peace, and to warn them against certain "enemies of the cross of Christ" (3:18).

Paul emphasized that the life of Christians should be such that everyone will be able to see "Christ living in me," as Paul once declared. Christian influence should be such that the lives lived mean much more than the words spoken. Paul outlined the Christian philosophy of religion in this letter to the Philippians Christians. While he says much the same things that Jesus said, he does not say them quite so simply. Paul urged the believers to live as citizens worthy of the heavenly kingdom, which, to him, meant doing the will of God in the church as it is done in heaven. He gave them the comfort of the assurance that the Living Christ lived with them every day. He reminded them that the main task of every Christian is that of telling others about Jesus Christ and what He can do for them. This was Paul's constant theme.

A study of Paul's life and ministry proves, without a shadow of doubt, that a triumphant witness does not allow physical surroundings and circumstances to prevent his testimony. So often the Christian waits to witness in a Sunday School class, a prayer meeting, or some other such meeting, not realizing that, whether he is conscious of it or not, he is witnessing for or against Jesus at all times—at home, at work or at play.

Probably the strongest witness Paul ever gave for Christ was while he was in prison in Rome, shackled at all times to a Roman guard. There is adequate proof of its effect on believers in Rome, who, no doubt, had become fearful of persecution. They became "much more bold to speak the word without fear" (v. 14). Paul's faith and courage strengthened their faith. This is true today. Young people, who love the Lord, should remember that their friends are watching them for evidences of that love and faith. When it is courageously displayed, it will encourage and inspire them to develop in themselves a like love and faith. That is triumphant witnessing.
