

Joseph B. Bunch Drowns In Sound Early Sunday Morning

Albemarle Sound claimed another victim Saturday night when Joseph Barnvilly Bunch, 24, lost his life by drowning.

According to reports, Bunch and Herman Adams went into the Sound some time after midnight Saturday for the purpose of setting nets. Due to rough water the boat capsized and Adams, equipped with a life preserver, decided to swim to shore in the vicinity of Cherry Point to summon help, leaving Bunch sitting on the bottom of the overturned boat.

About 8 o'clock Sunday morning a crew on Chowan County's Civil Defense boat arrived at the scene of the accident. Bunch was found under the boat with one hand holding on to a net.

He was a native of Elizabeth City but lived in Edenton 20 years, where he was a fisherman and painter.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Helen Lane Bunch; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Z. Bunch; a daughter, Martha Ella Bunch, at home; two brothers, Zane Bunch and Fred Bunch, both of Edenton; two sisters, Mrs. Bertha Mizelle and Miss Alice Faye Bunch, both of Edenton.

He was a member of the First Christian Church.

Funeral services were held at Williford Funeral Home Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The Rev. James MacKenzie, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, officiated and burial was in Beaver Hill Cemetery.

Pallbearers were Dennis Basnight, Edgar Rogerson, Bobby Wright, Dewey Whitehurst, Ed Wright and Milton Stillely.

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

By JAMES H. GRIFFIN, Soil Conservationist

"GRASSES AND LEGUMES WILL KEEP US OUT OF MR. MCGREGOR'S CABBAGE PATCH!"

What is the game situation on your farm? Do you have plenty of game the year around or does the wildlife on your farm leave during the hunting season or winter? In planning district cooperators say that during the summer they have plenty of game but when the winter comes the game moves to the nearby woods. Well you can't blame the game. There is not much food left in the fields and no shelter for them. During the summer there was plenty of food and good shelter but now that harvest has passed there is nothing for them in the field. Wildlife will not stay where food and protection is not provided.

Carroll and Fahey Byrum found that if they provided food and protection for wildlife, they spent the winter in the fields, too. They planted wildlife food strips in odd corners of their farms. Multiflora rose seedlings were set to provide protection for wildlife and to keep their livestock in the fields.

Gilliam Wood has planted food strips on the Hayes farm and has a farm plan to plant food strips each year. These food strips consist of Bicolor Lespedeza (shrub lespedeza) Sericea lespedeza. The Bicolor provides the food and Sericea provides the cover. Another plant Mr. Wood is using for wildlife and farm improvement is multiflora rose. He reports a large increase in birds, especially song birds, since he planted his multiflora rose about six years ago.

Multiflora rose provides protection for all wildlife and serves as a permanent fence for livestock on the farm.

Paul Ober of Rocky Hock has multiflora rose fence around part of his farm. This winter he plans to set a food stripe of Bicolor Lespedeza and Sericea Lespedeza. The North Carolina Wildlife and Resource Commission will furnish these plants free to district cooperators to help carry out their soil and water conservation plans. Mr. Ober's farm was re-planned this summer.

The Conservation Reserve program offers a fine opportunity for farmers who are placing land in program to increase the game population on their farm. One of the practices of the program is a wildlife program for the farm. It should be one of the cheapest practices to use on conservation land.

Sericea lespedeza is one of the plants you can use for cover on C. R. land. This is both a food crop and shelter crop for quail and rabbits. Cost of this crop is low and protection of our soils and wildlife is very high. Consider it when selecting a crop of your C. R. land.

Let's keep our wildlife in the fields during the winter! we have them all summer.
