

Large Supply New Grapes Available To Plant This Year

Estimated 50,000 Cuttings of New Dearing Variety of Muscadine Grape Ready

An estimated 50,000 cuttings of the newly-developed Dearing variety of muscadine grape will be available for planting this season.

According to Dr. C. F. Williams, horticultural scientist for the N. C. Agricultural Experiment Station, Dearing is, by far, the best perfect-flowered muscadine grape ever developed. In tests at Raleigh, it yielded 25 per cent more than any other perfect-flowered variety.

Dearing was first released last year. However, only 15-20,000 cuttings were available and the supply was quickly sold.

No non-yielding male vines are needed to pollinate Dearing. It pollinates itself and sets fruits satisfactorily when planted alone. Prior to development of perfect-flowered varieties, growers had to set one male vine for every eight female vines to assure a good set of fruit.

The fruit of the new Dearing variety is translucent green in color and about the size of Thomas. The flavor is much better than that of other perfect-flowered varieties available today. Also, Dearing is more resistant to black rot leaf spot. It ripens in late midseason.

Chief faults of Dearing have been its small berry size and rather firm texture. These are offset, however, by the high yield and fine flavor.

The Dearing was developed at the Coastal Plain Research Station at Willard. It was developed and named after the long-time superintendent of the station, Dr. Charles Dearing.
