Dear Three P's:

My husband is a wonderful guy, I love him very much and I would be lost without him. He is a member of several professional and service organizations and he is always attending meetings. At least once a year he attends some state or national convention and each time he is gone about a week. Upon my insistence he once took me to one of the state conventions held in the capitol. While I did not enjoy the convention itself, I did enjoy seeing the capitol and visiting the shops. Now he is some sort of delegate to a national convention to be held in Chicago and I want to go. He said he would be busy, unable to entertain me there and it would be expensive as he would have to pay all of my expenses. He does not like my going at all. Should I insist or forget about it.
—Rose.

Dear Rose:

This is a very delicate question to discuss as a great many men attend these conventions away from home with the idea that they are going to have a good time and do not want anything to interfere with this good time. It all depends upon what kind of convention it is. If it is a convention of a technical society, they usually are fairly drab and wives usually do not go as the men have to prepare the program agenda, arrange for and schedule meetings, and select the outstanding speakers to talk on the technical subjects involved. Usually there is no formal entertainment of any kind except the final wind-up dinner. On the other hand there are other conventions of various organizations that plan for a good time as well as taking care of the business of the convention. In some of these conventions men take their wives along for there is a committee appointed to arrange for the entertainment of the wives while the members attend the meetings of the society. This entertainment usually consists of bus trips to interesting and historical places in the area, a planned shopping tour of all the shops, several teas to meet people of the city in which the convention is held and if there is a theatre a planned trip to the theatre. Of course, all of this costs money and you usually have to buy a ticket to cover the costs of these trips. If your husband can afford it the trip might be interesting. On the other side of the question the men like to attend these conventions, especially if they do not have any direct responsibility for the organization of the conventions and setting it up. These boys like to have what they call a good time. They usually drink too much, they may take some lady they meet out to dinner and on the whole have what they call a good time without any restrictions on them as would be the case if you were to accompany them. It would be best to make immediate payment to the undersigned.

case if they had the good wife along. On the whole most conventions are boring as all get out and after you have attended a few, the excitement of attending wears off and they just become a matter of something to do out of the routine of life. Most men find after all that the excitement they are looking for is rather false and empty, that after the convention is over they are tired out with a great big throbbing headache and they start for home looking forward to seeing the good wife again with her welcoming arms and then they realize again that there is no joy in the world like her. If you have just taken the question up with your husband, I would not make an issue out of it but let him go and be so glad to see you on his return. However, if you will really want to go then prepare for the next one long in advance and have all of the answers to his objections and I think he will give in and be glad to have you with him for as a confirmed convention attendee the gloss must have worn off some time ago and he will really enjoy your company.
Dear Three P's:
I am thirty years of age; I have two sisters who are happily married with families. I live with my mother and take care of her. She is a hypochondriac and rather difficult to manage. My job is a good one and I like it. Because of my responsibility to my mother I have never gone out very much, but lately in the course of business I have met a wonderful man and he wants me to think over the question of marrying him. He has a good steady job. My mother, however, tells me that if I get married she will cut me out of her will. What should I do?
—Perplexed Hazel.

Dear Hazel:

As a woman of thirty, with business experience it seems that you should have your own answer. The problem is really one of deciding whether you want to live your own life as a married woman and have a family of your own, or whether you want some share in your mother's estate. With three daughters, all married, if you should decide that way, you could arrange for the care of your mother between you. The answer seems to be a simple one, jump the hurdle while you have a chance and tell your mother that is what you are going to do. If you do this perhaps it will cure her of being a hypochondriac and she will begin to enjoy life again.

Frankly Speaking

By Frank Roberts

First of all, my thanks to Mrs. C. C. Baker, the lady who won the transistor portable radio during the contest I had recently to find a name for my show. Thanks to her for taking the time to call me and to tell me how much she's enjoying that radio.

Tomorrow night should be fun. The big variety show takes place in the auditorium of Chowan High School. I'll be emceeding the various acts, and boy, there's plenty of talent. Not only from Chowan County but some from Sunbury, even as far away as Portsmouth, Va. Looks like a good show. Oh, there might be a repeat on "Gunsmoke," the drama that was so popular during the Lions Club Show.

Speaking of westerns getting kicked around, that's what Bob Hope does in his latest movie, "Alias Jesse James."

A week ago on my show, my quiz question for the morning seemed to have stirred up more than the usual amount of interest. I had a lot of prizes to anyone who could answer the question: "Who portrayed Frankenstein?" That sounds like a simple deal. Immediately, Boris Karloff comes to mind, but Mr. Karloff portrayed Frankenstein's monster. Frankenstein, himself, was a kindly old professor, but the horror element of the movie was in everyone's mind, as a host of guesses came to WCDJ that morning. Lon Chaney, Bela Lugosi, C. Aubrey Smith—those were just a few of the guesses. The correct answer was Clive Brook. Now folks will turn to each other and say: "who's he?" I'll tell you this, I wouldn't have known the answer. Picked it out of a magazine.

Nancy Carson is back from her vacation. Meanwhile, my thanks to Jane Dulaney for doing an excellent job on Nancy's show. Jane handled the show like she'd been doing that sort of thing, when actually it was her first such experience. I think you'll be hearing more of Jane on WCDJ. More of, Frankly Speaking next week in The Chowan Herald.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

How scientific understanding of God gives new inspiration and meaning to life will be a theme presented at Christian Science services Sunday.

Highlighting the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Christian Science" is the Golden Text from I Peter (1:25): "The word of the Lord endureth for ever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you."

Selections to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy include: "The time for thinkers has come. Truth, independent of doctrines and time-honored systems, knocks at the portal of humanity" (vii:13-15).

Among the Bible passages will be this verse from Isaiah (50:4): "The Lord God hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak a word in season to him that is weary: he wakeneth morning by morning, he wakeneth mine ear to hear as the learned."

clings to curves like a cat on a carpet!
the travel-lovin' Chevrolet

Nothing else but a dyed-in-the-wool sports car like the Corvette can take a turn with such solid assurance!

It's easy to see where Chevrolet gets its road sense. With big coil springs at every wheel, a firm, wider stance and all of its pounds distributed with painstaking care, Chevy's born with it.

The only thing that may be hard to understand is how it can offer the ride it does, along with so many other luxury-car virtues, and still compete in the low-price field.

We use the word compete only in the sense of price. For with a ride as special as Chevy's, real competitors are hard to come by. There's a world of difference between Chevrolet's coil springs at all four wheels and the leaf springs that most other cars still use. Take a Chevy down a snaky back road and you'll feel the difference in the sure way it holds through curves and shoots over rough spots with hardly a ripple. This one's really made to travel and loves every minute of it.
