

KNOW YOUR SOCIAL SECURITY

Earl W. Trinkle, representative of the Social Security Administration, is in Edenton every Thursday at the North Carolina Employment Security Commission office in the Citizens Bank Building.

Do you know where your money goes when your social security tax is paid. Many do not. You should be vitally interested, as these social security payments are your insurance against loss of earnings due to old-age or disability.

Your Social Security Program is financed through two separate trust funds. The Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, created in 1939, and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, created in 1956. Each of these funds is kept separate from all other accounts in the U. S. Treasury. As of December 30, 1958, the Old-Age and Survivors Trust Fund had assets of 21.9 billion dollars. The Disability Trust Fund had assets of one billion, three hundred seventy-nine million dollars. The money deducted weekly from your salary or paid by you at the end of the year, as a self-employed person goes directly into these trust funds.

What happens to your money when it is received? Most of the receipts of the trust funds are used to pay current benefits and for administrative expenses of the program. The remainder is invested in Federal Securities which can readily be converted into cash when needed to meet expenses.

Trust fund investments are limited by law to securities issued or guaranteed by the Federal Government. There are two principal reasons for this restriction.

First, it is designed to insure the safety of the funds: Government securities are the safest form of investment.

Second, it keeps this publicly operated program from investing funds in competitive business ventures thereby avoiding direct public intervention in business management.

Your Social Security Trust Funds are lenders and the U. S. Treasury is the borrower. The trustees of the funds receive and hold Federal securities as evidence of these loans. Likewise, the Treasury Department uses this money just as it uses the money borrowed from other lenders, to help pay the expenses of the Government. The purchase of Federal obligations by the trust fund does not increase the national debt, neither is the public taxed twice in order to pay interest on or to redeem the securities held by the trust funds.

Should you have further questions regarding the way your funds are handled by the Social Security Trust Funds, send a letter or post card to your local Social Security District Office, located at 220 W. Brambleton Ave., Norfolk, Va. Ask for the booklet, "Facts about the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Disability Insurance Trust Fund."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

persons with whom he could have fellowship. Would it not, then, seem illogical to assume that God would let great minds, such as have been known throughout the world in many generations, develop and produce the beautiful jewels of their spirits — and then wipe them out by death? God surely would defeat his own purposes if death had the last word. Therefore, the belief that man's nature is essentially spirit proclaims our faith in immortality. We're creatures of two worlds, the physical and the spiritual. Our real business is with the life of character—love, justice, truth, beauty, goodness, holiness. This essential part of our humanity cries out for continued life. The saints at death have realized that their lives have only just begun.

The very rationality of the universe argues for immortality, too. The development from cell to bodies, and bodies to mind, and minds to spirituality — all this calls for purpose. God's purposes are seen in their growth, and it finds its fulfillment in immortal life.

A man enters the kingdom of heaven at that point in his life when he renounces sin and says yes to God. Such a man finds that his self-assertive methods and interests have given way to concern about God and others. He now enthusiastically and sincerely seeks truth, beauty, goodness, and holiness. Such a man has found the abundant life. Such a man has put off the old—immortality, impurity, passion, evil desire and covetousness (Colossians 3:5), and has embraced the new life, reflecting the jewels of compassion, kindness, lowliness, meekness, patience and love.

The life of the spirit continues on after death of the physical body. Jesus' Resurrection has proven this fact. Jesus' life of love, compassion, and a steadfast loyalty to the will of God was honored by God with immortality. Such will be the case of all who follow in his steps.

We must assume, then, that "heaven" is a nonphysical state of existence in which the life of spiritual growth continues. It is not one of blissful "nothingness". It is a place for fuller and complete self-realization. Heaven offers opportunities for growth in knowledge, goodness, beauty and holiness. Worship, friendships, and enjoyment of the higher life will be the order of the day.

All this we believe because Christ risen! It is small wonder that men have shouted through the centuries: Alleluia!

TRY A HERALD CLASSIFIED

Frankly Speaking

By Frank Roberts

First of all, I would sincerely like to thank everyone who congratulated me as regards the announcement in last week's edition of The Herald.

Last week, National Library Week, found me in the Shepard-Pruden Memorial Library reading to the many, many children that visited the library. We had about 30 the first day, between 50 and 60 the following two days. The boys and girls had fun, and so did I. And, you know, something like this is quite an education for me. I found that children of pre-school and early-school age are curious, intelligent and eager. The only major difficulty was that the little boys wanted ghost stories and the little girls wanted stories about princesses. A happy compromise was made with the very clever Dr. Seuss stories, plus Uncle Remus.

One thing I did realize, too, was that in many of the children's stories, there's a good share of blood and guts that would put many a television western to shame. Also many of these stories are completely without a moral of any kind, stories that are regarded by many as children's classics.

While at the library, I picked up a book called "Bernard Clare". It was written by James Farrell, whose most famous work was the Studs Lonigan trilogy. So many writers today try so hard to emulate Farrell, but fall so far short.

I'm actually a poor analyst so far as books are concerned, but I do know that no writer has been able to capture moods, thoughts, feelings of youth as well as Farrell. He was, and still is, a genius in his field. Incidentally, a movie is being made about Studs Lonigan, but Hollywood, for some very poor reasons, decided to change the ending. That should result in destroying the entire effect. Closing thought can well be applied to Mr. Farrell: "The most original authors are not so because they advance what is new, but because they put what they have to say as if it had never been said before."

Every subject's duty is the king's; but every subject's soul is his own. —Shakespeare.
