Malcolm B. Seawell Speaks At Lions Meeting Monday Night

Greeted by an almost 100 percent attendance of Lions and a group of visitors, Malcolm B. Seawell, one of the four candidates for Governor, spoke at the Lions Club meeting Monday night. Mr. Seawell was introduced by Mayor John Mitchener and was accompanied by O. M. Dodson, a pilot who flew a plane to Elizabeth City, from where they motored to Edenton.

Mr. Seawell stated that he had no prepared speech, but he preferred to speak "off the cuff." He referred to industry promotion in North Carolina, saying, "wild and expensive type of government is not unusual in any campaign, which he cannot go along with. He said North Carolina has grown gradually and not on a start and stop basis, and that it has grown that way because leaders realized that from the depth of poverty the people must be brought up to a place of pre-eminence, for the state's greatest resource is the people.

Referring to education, he went back to the days of little schooling. He pointed out that over the years 12 grades were added to the schools where young people were educated to a point they could reassert themselves. He said teachers will receive a 5% salary increase but when it comes to a $100,000, 000 school program, there will be a pay day, for it would be necessary to raise taxes 17.06%. Heavy taxes, he said, will not only keep people from coming into the state, but it will prevent industry from locating here, which is a source of per capita income. He pointed out that the state under present conditions will realize enough money to continue the various services.

The speaker also stated that North Carolina is one of 17 states to live within its budget. All others are in the red, he said, and some have exhausted their credit, but North Carolina has been living within its means for a long time. He said North Carolina is 45th in per capita income, but 7th in the amount of money used for schools, and has been able to pay off bonded indebtedness when it comes due. The state has a triple A bond rating, he said, the highest in the land.

The speaker pointed out that new industry will raise per capita income, but that we do not want industries looking for a give-away. He recommended industries which use products raised locally, referring to the starch concern to locate in Washington County. Such industries, he pointed out, not only increase income, but raise income for farmers. He also stressed the advantage of industry in East-Corn Carolina due to the water and labor supply. He said improving ports and highways, too, would help industries to focus attention to this area.
