

SENATOR SAM ERVIN SAYS

Washington—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has completed hearings on the U-2 plane incident. The Senate is now awaiting the Committee report. It should be helpful in serving to focus attention on the need for top-level coordination of our defense efforts.

Lack Of Coordination—While I am not a member of the Committee, the testimony released to the public indicates that the U-2 incident was not wisely handled. It does not strengthen our standing in the world when a "covering" lie is national policy. I think the Administration would have been wiser to have told the truth or to have said nothing.

It is hard to make everything run smoothly in all facets of our national defense and intelligence-gathering systems. There ought to be more emphasis placed on the problem of coordination, America's glaring lack of recent years. Its deficiency puts us at best in a poor psychological condition.

Rapid Pace—With little time remaining before the conventions of the Democratic and Republican parties, it is self-evident that any drastic legislative proposals ought to be put over until January. What concerns me about hasty legislative action is that such proposals as minimum wage changes, Social Security amendments and the like by their very nature need most careful study. Both the Senate and the House have already passed education bills. The House adopted the Powell amendment to its bill and thus delayed action until some agreement can be reached. The Powell amendment cannot be left in the House bill. If it is retained the entire bill must be defeated by whatever means at our disposal because it changes the bill from one aimed at helping education into one which would be punitive. My belief is that the Senate and House Conferences will strike this amendment unanimously. Minimum wage legislation and the Social Security amendments, not to mention the numerous appropriations bills roving foreign aid, defense and other federal activities, require adequate time for debate.

As a consequence of this situation—and with the air charged with politics—the wisest performance would be for the Congress to put off action until a more calm and deliberate atmosphere prevails.

Voting And Speaking—Last week I had the pleasure of delivering two college commencement talks. The first was at Converse College at Spartanburg; the second was at Mitchell College in Statesville. As it was necessary to be home to vote in the primary election, these talks fitted my schedule perfectly. As a rule the Senate is taking up legislation and voting on matters which make attendance necessary at the time of the year when the schools at colleges are holding commencements. This makes scheduling speaking dates very difficult.

George Alma Byrum and Al Phillips and Ernest Ward, representing Town Council, entered a request for $5,000 instead of $4,000 to be paid the town for rural fire fighting. This request, too, was held over until the June 20 meeting.

While the Commissioners were swapped with figures, they pointed out that an agricultural building is badly needed at the colored school, but that with demands for money being so heavy, they could hardly see where the money was coming from for this project. Joe Conger, Chairman of the Edenton School Trustees, also emphasized the need for a new white grammar school building and pointed out that the present building could be utilized as a building to house various county offices.

Sheriff Earl Goodwin also entered a request for employing a roving deputy sheriff to patrol the rural area and emphasized the need for an air conditioning unit in the sheriff's office.

Tax Supervisor William P. Jones reported to the Commissioners that property valuation has increased in every township. This year, he pointed out property valuation, with corporate excise taxes estimated, amounts to $21,031,257. This compares with $20,708,087 last year.

All of the requests for appropriations will be considered at a special meeting of the Commissioners Monday, June 20, at which time they expect to set a tentative tax rate for the new fiscal year.

During the meeting on-premise beer licenses were approved for William Reeves and Clyde Slade at the Stork Club.
