They attended tour of the Governor's Mansion, N. C. Art Museum, home of Dr. John T. Caldwell, chancellor of N. C. State College, Raleigh and John Harris' home and garden.

Classes on various home economics subjects were taught during the week, including "Frame Your Pictures", Pauline Gordon; "Learning To Appreciate Art", Charles Stanford; "1960 Inheritance Law for N. C.", James C. Little, along with other interesting classes.

Tobacco Petitions Being Circulated

H. O. West, local ASC office manager, reports that the State ASC Office has received information from several parts of the State in regard to petitions which are being circulated pertaining to tobacco allotments.

"We have not had an opportunity to see any of these petitions," says Mr. West, "but understand from information furnished us that the petitions are requesting that farmers be permitted to rent or lease their tobacco allotments and in some instances the petitions are requesting that authority be given to handle tobacco allotments in the same manner as cotton allotments are now handled. We are also informed that some of the petitions have requested release and reapportionment authority for tobacco."

Mr. West says he believes that the circulation of such petitions will have a detrimental effect upon the over-all tobacco program and that farmers should be fully informed before they sign such petitions.
