

SENATOR SAM ERVIN SAYS

Washington — Getting to the end of a Congressional session is always hectic. The last session was no different—the Senate met until the early morning hours of last Thursday and was unable to adjourn since die as planned.

Appraisal — Whether or not the Congress accomplished much or little depends on the political philosophy that one holds. For example, if a person believes in an ultra-liberal philosophy of government, that person would probably feel that the Congress failed inasmuch as it did not pass many of the extreme bills proposed by those who hold those views. On the other hand, if a person feels that the Federal government should keep itself out of all programs, that person would probably hold the view that Congress has done far too much. I think that some progress was made. For example; this is true with respect to the revision of the Social Security Act which provides many good features. As I have repeatedly stated, I shared the view that Congress should have put off most of the controversial bills until January. Subsequent events have sustained that point of view.

Plans For Recess—I expect to spend most of the Congressional recess in North Carolina. There are many speaking engagements to be filled. Moreover, I always look forward to being with the people to get their views on public matters.

Next Session—I have several legislative proposals which I want to push in the First Session of the Eighty-Seventh Congress, including the bill I introduced this session, the so-called Mallory Bill dealing with voluntary confessions. I also plan to work for legislation to revise the electoral system to give proportionate votes to the major political parties in order to get both parties out from the inordinate influence wielded by pressure groups. It is not right for a majority of one vote in a state to nullify all the other votes cast in effect. I expect to introduce legislation on this subject among the first items of business in the new session.

KNOW YOUR SOCIAL SECURITY

John T. Grooms, representative of the Social Security Administration, is in Edenton every Thursday at the North Carolina Employment Security Commission office in the Citizens Bank Building.

A fully insured person can apply for social security benefits at age 65, a woman at age 62.

When a woman elects to receive benefits before she is age 65, she receives a reduced payment. This applies to working women as well as wives of working husbands. The reduced payments continue as long as she lives, unless her husband dies first. In this case she receives the full widow's benefits.

A wife who has a child in her care receives the full unreduced benefit. A wife is entitled to benefits until the following occur: The worker or the wife dies, or there is a divorce. In the event of the worker's death, the wife's benefits are changed to widow's benefits. The widow will receive also a lump-sum death payment, provided she was living in the same household of the worker. If she and her husband were not living together, the person (and this includes the widow) who paid the funeral expenses will be eligible for this payment. Application for the lump-sum must be made within two years of the worker's death. The lump-sum payment is 3 times the amount of the worker's monthly benefit, but not more than $255 and cannot exceed the funeral expenses.
