

SENATOR SAM ERVIN SAYS

Washington — There has been considerable discussion lately about foreign relations as a subject within the realm of the interest of the people of this country should be withdrawn as a subject for reasonable debate. I expect to discuss the issues as I see them now as well as in the Senate.

Castro—There is no reason for any doubt about the dedication of Castro to Khrushchev. The conduct of Castro at the United Nations is disgusting to most Americans. It is difficult to imagine that a person who occupies a high post in modern times will resort to the type of conduct he demonstrated. His conduct would be amusing were it not for the seriousness of the encroachment of communism through his government to our doorsteps in Cuba. Another disappointment is the gullibility of those who failed to see Castro's grandstand demagoguery in the hotel selection and those who congregated to cheer him. This was racial exploitation at its worst. The clowning of Khrushchev and Castro and the smiling interviews should not cause us to forget the fundamental issues between democracy and communism and that communism is dedicated to the destruction of the free world. Recent evidence of this fact is found in the way the communists moved into the Congo to take over that troubled land and almost succeeded.

Effectiveness of the UN—There are many who fear that the United Nations will not be able to live up to the high hopes and aspirations of peace-loving peoples of the earth. This is so because of the growing danger of power blocs that tie down its actions. If the UN degenerates into a pure power squabble without dedication to the principles for which it was founded, America's modern hope for peace and freedom in the world may be crushed. Therefore it behooves the United States to effectively prepare for the future.

The 1961 Ford Falcon, most successful new car in history, features a new convex-shaped aluminum grille and new optional, 101-horsepower engine, but preserves the styling, maneuverability, interior roominess and 23.7-cubic-foot luggage capacity of the 1960 model. Shown above is the 1961 Falcon Fordor Sedan. Continuing its proven economy reputation, the 1961 Falcon will deliver up to 30 miles per gallon on regular grade fuel, goes 4,000 miles between oil changes, and introduces new and longer lasting bright trim and underbody parts, including a double-wrapped aluminized muffler.

On the day he made his major presentation he held the floor for over four hours, and all of his discussion was relevant. He maintained that such an increase would throw half a million persons out of work, that in order for labor to keep current wage differentials as between jobs there would have to be an increase all up the line, and he expressed grave doubts as to whether the bill was constitutional as a result of using volume of sales as the test of coverage.

In spite of the arguments of Senator Goldwater the bill passed the Senate by a substantial majority and was sent to a joint conference with representatives of the House. Here Senator Kennedy offered to make still more concessions but he would not give up his proposal for determining the basis of coverage. The House conferees refused to change the concept of Interstate Commerce, and in consequence no agreement could be reached. Senator Kennedy insisted that without this change there was no point in having a minimum wage bill this year—that anything else would fail to be progress and that he would prefer to wait until the next Congress.

Since bills do not carry over from one Congress to another it will be necessary to start from scratch to bring up minimum wage legislation again. And since the next Congress may be either more or less liberal than the present one it is impossible to forecast what may happen. But one fact is clear: Senator Kennedy has suffered a major defeat, and it is not likely that he can make political capital out of it. This is because the basic issue is one of changing the constitutional concept of interstate commerce, and most persons can not be convinced that such a change is desirable or in the public interest.

The whole idea of the convention recess of the Congress was an error. It was supposed to be "smart" politics because it was believed that important campaign issues could be developed—either by passing "desirable" legislation and going to the country with it as a record or, in case there was a veto, use that to show that the Republicans are not concerned about the welfare of the public. That it has not worked out that way is so obvious that the only discussion now is on how much damage the special session has done to Senators Kennedy and Johnson.

A man who is master of patience is master of everything else. —Lord Halifax.

Records Should Be Kept On Lamb Sales

Sheep producers who market unshorn lambs this fall should maintain full records on their sales in order to make proper applications for payment next spring under the wool incentive program, W. E. Matthews, chairman of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation State Committee, points out.

Failure to keep full records in the past has caused difficulties for producers in obtaining their unshorn lamb payments under the program, Matthews stated. The sales records for lambs sold must include the name of the buyer, his signature and the number of live-weight of lambs, plus the description "unshorn."

Lamb feeders who buy lambs should also keep accurate records of all their purchases of unshorn lambs, including dates of purchases and the number and liveweight when purchased. Adequate records must be maintained by producers in order for them to certify to the accuracy of the information contained in payment applications. Inadequate reporting of lamb purchases on payment applications has presented problems in administering the wool program.

Records should be kept in a safe place at home or they may be filed at the county ASC office for safekeeping. While the final date for making applications under the wool program for the 1960 marketing year is not until April 30, 1961, applications may be submitted any time between now and then, Matthews said.

HAYSEED

By UNCLE SAM

Some Forgotten Things Perhaps but few under middle age would know how to make and tie a hickory withe.

Not many are living who ever saw a hand carded, hand spun and hand woven cloth colored with dye from bark and rusted nails, made into suits and dresses at home.

Crackers shipped in barrels. Substitute for soda made by burning corn cobs in an oven and using the ashes for soda.

The ice house where ice cut from a pond was stored and covered with saw dust in an ice house.

How to stretch a rabbit skin on a forked stick. When dried they would sell for a penny each.

Harvesting grain with a scythe and cradle.

A horse drawn one seated two wheeled cart.

A home drying kiln used to dry fruit in rainy weather.

The ash hopper used for making lye used in making home made soap.

The wash bowl and pitcher a part of every well furnished bedroom.

The old fashioned cutting knife in almost every barn, used for cutting up rough feed.

The old time grub stake for workmen consisting of one peck of meal, five pounds of fat meat, one quart of molasses and one pound of coffee per week.

To expect nothing but what you labored for and earned.

How to be happy and contented at home.

The National Outlook Failure Of The Minimum Wage Bill

By RALPH ROBEY

Everyone knows that the basic reason for the session of Congress after the national conventions was political. None the less, there was some legislation that was regarded as imperative. One bill put in this category was minimum wages. But the session had adjourned without being able to get agreement on this subject.

The House had passed its bill before the recess. This provided for increasing minimum wages from $1.00 to $1.15 and extending coverage by about 1,400,000. There was disagreement with both the increase and the extended coverage, but the Administration was willing to accept this bill. This acceptance was based upon various studies which had been made by the Department of Labor showing that an increase to $1.15 would not cause too much disturbance, and that is the test which controls the advice given to President Eisenhower.

The Senate bill was much more extreme in all particulars. It proposed the minimum should be $1.25, that coverage be increased by four million (originally it was five million, but Senator Kennedy agreed to an amendment eliminating one million), and that the test of whether a company should come under the act would be determined by the dollar volume of its sales, not whether it was engaged in interstate commerce.

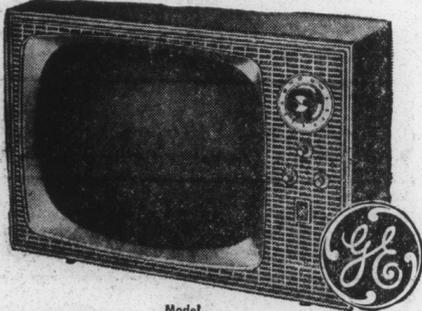

The leader of the opposition to this Kennedy bill was Senator Barry Goldwater of Ariz.
