

No Comment

By JAMES W. DOUTHAT
Assistant Vice President, Government Relations Division of the National Association of Manufacturers

"NO COMMENT" is a report of incidents on the national scene, and does not necessarily reflect NAM policy or position.

Washington—The hearings by the House Ways and Means Committee on President Kennedy's tax program have served to point up the vital necessity for enactment of real tax rate reform legislation if the nation is to achieve the economic growth essential for the future.

So widespread has been the opposition expressed in the Kennedy program, there does not seem to be any likelihood that any substantial part of it will be enacted this year.

Even the AFL-CIO joined vigorously in criticism of the Administration's tax proposals—which include a $1,700,000,000 tax credit for business investment in return for acceptance by business of various tax penalties.

The Kennedy program—in the words of Charles R. Sligh, Jr., executive vice president of the National Association of Manufacturers—conspires up the picture of the "government strangling the taxpayer with one hand and offering him artificial resuscitation with the other."

Business witnesses before the Ways and Means Committee were almost unanimous in condemning the key provisions of the Administration's program. In addition to the proposed tax credit, the key provisions include repeal of the four percent dividend credit and $50 exclusion, rigid regulations of business expenses, drastically changing the present method of taxing business income earned abroad, and tax withholding on dividends and interest.

These penalties would be expected to retrieve for the government the $1,700,000,000 granted annually as tax credits for business investment.

The Kennedy argument for the tax credit is that it would result in the creation of new jobs to help solve the unemployment problem. But members of the Ways and Means Committee—both Democrats and Republicans—indicated a growing belief that the Administration's proposals cannot possibly bring about the solid economic growth that is essential.

What is necessary, a number of business witnesses testified, is enactment of the Herlong-Baker bill which among other things, would lower the personal and corporation tax rate to a maximum of 47 percent by a series of five annual reductions. This, its advocates contend, would make capital available for a surge of business expansion and modernization which would create many new jobs and, in addition, provide in the long run far more tax revenue than would be lost by the reductions.

By proposing his tax program President Kennedy recognized the relationship between tax policy and economic growth. This was a step forward, but his specific proposals failed miserably to meet the needs.

Business witnesses agreed in general, that comprehensive legislation (like the Herlong-Baker bill) is essential to provide relief from the present restrictive impact of taxes on capital accumulation and use.

OUTDOOR TIPS

from the Ancient Age Sportsman's Idea Exchange

FISHING

After all is said and done—and even if most anglers deny it—about the favorite bait for fishing is the faithful old worm. Undoubtedly the fact that fish also like worms has much to do with the popularity of the bait. Also, all bait fishermen have pet theories about how best to get a good supply of worms with the least amount of work, and without being too much of an early bird. Here's one way almost (repeat, almost) guaranteed to get you a mess of night crawlers any time of day. Fill a soft drink bottle with water and add a tablespoon of powdered mustard. If there are any worms in the area you sprinkle, they'll come up fast to see what's going on.

Some people like to throw things away, some like to save things. If you've been thinking about throwing away your old canvas water bag just because it doesn't hold water, stop! You'll discover that once you split it open across the top it will make a dandy fishing creel.

Trying to keep a neat tackle box is a problem all anglers have in common. Here's a helpful hint in that direction. An excellent container for odds and ends of fishing equipment is a discarded ice cube tray. Plastic variety works the best, and it fits easily into a large tackle box. Other handy knickknack holders are the plastic pill bottles you've been throwing away.

CAMPING

Any camp cooking is made easier with a grill. If you've been having trouble locating one at the local store, try the junk yard. The shelves from old refrigerators and stoves do the job just fine.

And keeping along the lines of outdoor cooking, this tip should prove to be popular, for it is designed to save sportsmen that degrading job of scrubbing the pots after the meal is finished. Next time before placing your skillet or coffee pot over the coals, rub the bottom with soap. You'll find that it cleans up about 100 per cent easier.

HUNTING

This tip is a natural for barbers, but any sportsman who plans to eat what he shoots should benefit from it. After you've downed your deer and before you make the first cut into it, clip away the hair along the area which you plan to slice open. A nold pair of hand-unsentential government spending—so as to increase the chances for tax reduction and for balanced budgets.

It is not generally known that already Mr. Kennedy has asked Congress for authority to spend $10,232,000,000 more, over a two-year period, than was proposed by President Eisenhower before he left the White House.

And more spending requests are being prepared for submission to Congress.

The latest official forecast contemplates a $2,000,000,000 deficit during the present fiscal year (ending on June 30) and a $2,800,000,000 "red ink" operation during the next fiscal year.

But a disturbing prediction has now come from Elmer B. Staats, deputy director of the Budget Bureau, that next year's deficit more likely will be double the present estimate—and may soar to around $5,600,000,000.

All of which emphasized the necessity for economy in every way possible.

operated hair clippers is ideal for the job. In this way you can dress out the deer without getting any hair mixed in with the meat.

SCHOOL LESSON

dreamed up by people who never roll up their sleeves or open up their hearts and minds. Life has great meaning for people who are not overly endowed with this world's goods. It has divine excitement for many who are not of the "inside" with men who are influential. The poem in Ecclesiastes 3:1-9 sets life in proper perspective: "For everything there is a season . . ."

The hardest lesson to learn is that of seeing life in this perspective. For example, when a society accepts and even applauds public display of affection, it works havoc on the deep, sacred meaning of love. When this happens, life loses much of its grandeur and purpose. When emotions are used and words are uttered without careful thought, they devastate instead of bless.

Without the benefit of the good news about life which the Christian faith brings to us, we might easily agree with the somewhat pessimistic conclusion in Ecclesiastes 3:9: "What gain has the worker from his toil?"

As life moves into its so-called middle years, disillusionment frequently sets in. Why don't the young suffer from melancholy? The answer is that there are so many primary human experiences to excite and challenge the young. But when these concerns are fixed in experience, eagerness takes wings and the imagination is no longer stimulated. So, for us, the spiritual dimensions of life—those that never suffer eclipse—are essential as we enter the years of maturity. They project life beyond the limited horizon of time and place. It is by our ardent cultivation of the spiritual through effective Christian citizenship in our homes, our churches and the world that a whole new area of experience opens up.

Ecclesiastes teaches that our physical selves are but temporary residents in a transitory world. The New Testament makes clear, however, that this is but the initial stage of our life. The more we think of it in this light, the more convinced we are that this is the shorter end of our personal consciousness. It is therefore fitting that we pray to God for help in the use of our abilities to see life in divine perspective and to live
