

WITH THE FARM WOMEN

By MAIDRED MORRIS

Old Machine Converted Into Table

How would you like to have a new table for your home at little expense? Mrs. Fred Snow, Dobson, Rt. 2, has converted an old sewing machine into a table. Miss Ella Hampton, assistant home economics agent in Surry County, says Mrs. Snow cleaned the machine base and made a birch top for the table. She is doing a second machine base so she will have a pair of tables to use in her birch paneled den.

New Spring Outfits

Home Demonstration Club members in Lincoln County have found they can save money by making their clothes. According to Mrs. Charlotte Bamley, home economics agent, the women wore dresses they had made to their club meetings. They reported having saved from $5 to $30 by making their own outfits.

Chair Upholstered

For $3.20 and a day's work, Mrs. Grover Horton of Franklin County has a new chair. Mrs. Horton recently found an old chair and tore it apart. She put in extra springs, padding and webbing, and reupholstered it for $3.20.

Mrs. Frances Fuller, assistant home economics agent, says Mrs. Horton now has a new looking channel back chair.

Construction of Window Curtains

"Homemakers in Montgomery County have been busy learning to make different types of window curtains," reports Mrs. Martha Harris, home economics agent.

"Eighteen club women attended a workshop and made tier curtains, ruffled curtains, and lined draperies. Now these women will be able to teach others in their community how to make curtains."

Club President Makes Hats

Mrs. R. L. Searle, Wire Grass Club president in Carteret County, is teaching club women in her county the "tricks of the trade" in hat making. Mrs. Floy Garner, home economics agent, says Mrs. Searle studied millinery for two years and makes an excellent teacher for the women.

Mrs. Foster Morris, who is a clothing leader, is attending workshops with Mrs. Searle so she can learn techniques involved in hat making and then help teach at the workshops.

Sewing Machine Attachments

Do you use your sewing machine attachments? Mrs. Nell Garrison, home economics agent in Henderson County, found her club women were not using their attachments regularly. "You should use your attachments," said Mrs. Garrison, "because you have invested your money in them. They will save time and energy. They also will help your garments have a more finished look."

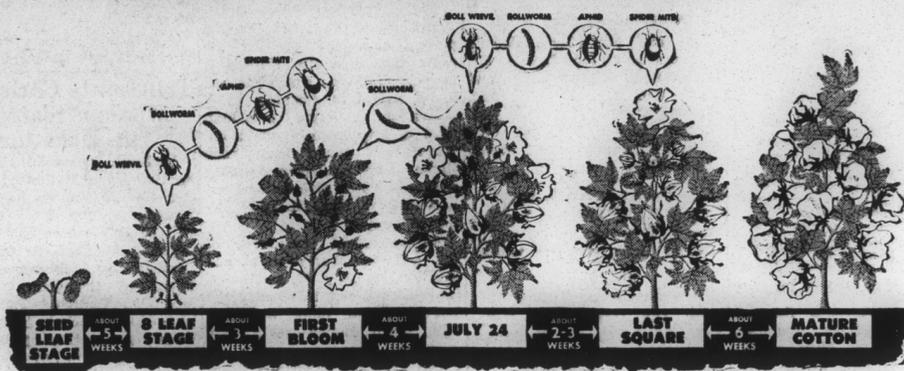

The club women carried their attachments to the club meetings and learned how to use them.

Nothing more impairs authority than a too frequent or indiscreet use of it.

A PRACTICAL COTTON INSECT CONTROL PROGRAM

Timing of insecticide applications based on recommendations of North Carolina State College

This season, cotton farmers in North Carolina are being offered a new concept in cotton insect control.

The new program is the result of research studies conducted by North Carolina State College, and has been called a practical, economical, and profitable method of producing cotton in this area.

According to North Carolina State officials the new method is more simple, more effective, and more economical than previous programs. State officials urge the adoption of this new program, since it will tend to insure the production of higher yields of cotton at lower cost and with less risk.

Although the new program is designed to control boll weevils more effectively, there are built-in features which improve control of other cotton insect pests.

Scientific proof of dates when insects emerge and migrate, combined with data on critical plant development stages, laid the groundwork for the program timing. Latest information on modern insecticides and equipment formed the basis for the chemicals and methods of application recommended by State officials for use in the program.

Basically the program is one of "preventive control." At the eight-leaf stage, the farmer should make four applications at five-day intervals using recommended insecticides at the proper dosages. If small bollworms injure 5 percent or more of the squares during the mid-season period an additional application of a recommended insecticide should be used.

Regular applications should be resumed on July 24. Continue these applications at five-day intervals until plants stop squaring.

The farmer is urged to provide spider mite control throughout the season by cultural methods or by use of miticides.

Throughout the season, it is recommended that farmers use the broadcast method of application with boom-type sprayers or dusters. On dusters use flat dust nozzles. Sprayer booms should have hollow-cone nozzles spaced 20 inches apart on booms. The booms should be far enough above cotton plants so that the nozzle patterns will overlap before reaching the plants.

New Books At Local Library

Miss Marion Robertson, librarian at Shepard-Pruden Memorial Library announces that there is now a section of new books for children ages 8-12, at the library. This is the Law

By ROBERT E. LEE (For the N. C. Bar Association)

Exemptions Of Debtors

What, in general, is meant by the exemption laws of debtors?

All states have statutes known as exemption laws, which provide that, no matter how just a debt may be that is due, certain property may not be levied upon and sold to satisfy a judgment. These laws differ greatly in the several states. Many of these statutes go into much detail, naming in many instances a long list, mainly household articles, which are exempt.

The eastern states are far less liberal than the western states. In California, for example, the head of a family is allowed a homestead exemption of not exceeding $5,000 in addition to a long list of personal articles.

In North Carolina there are two types of exemptions, both provided for in the Constitution of North Carolina: personal property exemptions and homestead exemptions. In this State a debtor may assert free from the claims of his creditors any of his personal property up to the value of five hundred dollars and a homestead of not exceeding one thousand dollars in real estate.

These exemption laws are designed to prevent a grasping creditor from taking all of the property of his debtor so that the debtor and the debtor's family are not left destitute, without clothing and furniture, tools necessary to earn a livelihood, or the means to make a new financial start in life—in short in a position where they must become public charges. The public interest is made by law superior to the private claim of a private creditor.

If the judgment debtor has neither real nor personal property out of which a judgment can be satisfied, the securing of a judgment in a court action may be a barren victory. One cannot get blood out of a turnip. There can be no imprisonment for ordinary debts.

How does a debtor assert his personal property exemption?

Unlike the homestead exemption, the debtor is not entitled to a $500 personal property exemption unless he or his attorney makes a demand that the exemption be set apart to him. After a judgment has been obtained in a legal action, the sheriff or other officer will levy upon the property of the debtor. It is at this point, or at any time before the sale of the property or the appropriation of it by the court to satisfy the judgment that the debtor or his attorney demands the exemption.

Who makes the appraisal for personal property and homestead exemptions?

The sheriff or other officer making the levy summons three appraisers.

The debtor has a right to select the articles to be appraised and laid off as his property exemption.

There will be a continuation of this subject next week.
