

The Roundup

By WILBORNE HARRELL

It will take at least another century for the nations of the world to reach a stage of development where they will agree to complete disarmament. There is too much distrust and mutual suspicion prevalent among the peoples of the world today for anything more than token disarmament to take place now. Frankly, I am cynical about any attempt at disarmament at the present time; the world atmosphere will have to clear up considerably, and a lot of storm clouds will have to roll by. The sunshine of mutual trust and peace is definitely not shining on this planet in this year of our Lord A.D. 1961. Now, if ever, is the time to keep your powder dry, and not dump it overboard.

TIDBITS—Time was when "In The Good Old Summertime" was a song with some meaning and significance. But with all this air conditioning and modern ways of keeping cool, folks nowadays don't know what an old-fashioned summer was really like . . . When will the United States cease trying to underwrite the world: when will we stop being a benevolent Atlas carrying the world on our shoulders? . . . If nothing of lasting value comes from President Kennedy's trip abroad, he at least had a nice trip.

STREET SCENE—A Salvation Army lass with the ever-present tambourine, garnering for the needy and the down-trodden. In my most pessimistic moods, I sometimes think the world is heading for the rocks. But as long as we have humanitarian organizations like the Salvation Army, there is still a little hope left on this benighted earth.

Caribbean. And the press and the radio will have a Roman holiday. They will also make a shambles out of my nerves, for now until the end of the hurricane season these storms will be played up (overplayed would be a better word) by the press and the radio. I admit a warning system should be in operation, and the public kept posted on the vagaries and erratic behavior of hurricanes, but I think we overdo it a trifle. There is absolutely no need for a running fire of comment at all times, some of which would be erroneous, requiring much correcting and backing and filling by newscasters. Why not spot the storm each half-hour while it is still far enough away not to be dangerous, and every fifteen minutes when it makes a closer approach. Only when the hurricane gets in our immediate area should a continuous hurricane watch go on the air.

Time To Check Pressure Canners

Skillet Meals Topic Of Club Meetings

"Skillet Meals" will be the demonstration given at July Home Demonstration Club meetings in Chowan County by food and nutrition leaders.

Every homemaker is interested in quick meals. One dish meals save time in preparation, serving and washing dishes. These can be very nutritious one dish meals which can save the homemaker a lot of time in preparing during the hot summer months. Safety leaders and craft leaders will give leader reports. There will be several items of business to be discussed.
