

THE MARK OF MAN

By TERRY JONES

Have you ever wondered what this world would be like if there were no human life living here? It is possible that it might be even more beautiful than it is now. Of course, it is not possible to know because man has left his mark on the world.

As we travel down the man-made highways we see the mark of man in the form of advertising signs. There are signs advertising almost everything from church services to all types of alcoholic beverages. I came to realize the mark of man one day as I walked through a large wooded area. I came to a beautiful tree that showed a small example of the wonderful creation of God. As I observed the tree more closely I saw filthy and vain words that had been carved permanently in the beautiful bark. For the first time I realized the mark of man. Still man has left his mark in many more ways than this. Man first left his mark in the Garden of Eden when he caught that disease known as sin. This disease has spread until the whole world is infested with it. Man has left his mark on the very Son of God. For hundreds of years the Jews had been waiting for the blessed Messiah to come and save them. Then at last when He came in the form of the man Jesus they wouldn't even accept Him. They beat Him, crowned Him with thorns, nailed Him to a cross and broke His bones until He died. Man left his greatest mark on one man. It was the shoulders of one man that bowed with every sin that man has ever committed or ever will commit, but this man was capable of it for He was the Son of God—Jesus Christ. He did this for you, what have you sacrificed for Him?

Sitting To Work Uses More Energy

For years homemakers have been told that to save energy they should work sitting down. But laboratory tests show that women actually use four percent more energy when sitting, rather than standing, to wash dishes and do ironing.

U. S. Department of Agriculture home economics recently gave a preliminary report of these tests at the annual meeting of the American Home Economics Association in Cleveland.

These studies are part of continuing research on energy use, which is providing basic information needed to improve housing and household equipment, and to develop ways to do housework with less effort.

Before advising homemakers whether to sit or stand for different jobs, the researchers say they need to know more about the real causes of fatigue and whether their finds so far apply to longer work periods as well as to the short periods used in the tests. For these studies women subjects worked at each job for four minutes. Many household tasks don't require spending a long time in one place, and in homes with small children even long jobs like ironing are apt to be interrupted.

The studies show that lifting things from kitchen counter to shelves above the counter takes more energy when done from a sitting position—an average of four per cent more for a five-pound object.

To roll out dough takes nine per cent more energy when you are sitting on a kitchen stool than it does when you're standing. Getting on and off a kitchen stool adds to the effort of work done while sitting.

Counting the energy used in this manner plus the extra energy used to wash dishes sitting down, the researchers found that women seated use a total of 13 per cent more energy for dishwashing than they used when standing up to do this job.

Although these results favor standing for short tasks to save energy, the researchers emphasize that saving energy is only one of many considerations in deciding whether it's best to work sitting or standing. Such decisions are important in planning kitchens and other work areas.

DOG DAYS

These are the times that try men's souls, and their air-conditioning units—the "dog days."

Gone are the perfect days of June and in their place are about 40 days of hot, sticky weather that clings from early July to mid-August.

You might have guessed it was the Greeks who gave us the name for this summer misery. World Book Encyclopedia says the ancients derived the name from the dog star, Sirius, which rises with the sun during this period.

Of course, the uncomfortable commuter might disagree and insist that the days were so named because dogs are most likely to get rabies at this time, as some superstitious people once believed.

Sirius, the brightest star in the heavens, radiates about 27 to 30 times as much light as the sun. That's not why the weather is so hot, but it is a reason why we pay any attention at all to the star.

Another reason is that Sirius, which is the head of the constellation Canis Major, or Great Dog, doesn't travel alone. It has a companion star made up of material that is about 50,000 times as dense as water. One cubic inch of material from this star would weigh about one ton on the earth.

This fat friend was the first such "white dwarf" star discovered.

Circuit Assembly At Portsmouth Aug. 4-6
