

The National Outlook Kennedy Tackles Transportation

By RALPH ROBEY

President Kennedy finally has reit his message on transportation to the Congress.

No mention is made of the recent report on railroads by the special commission which was discussed in this space a few weeks ago. That is logical. That analysis considered only the problems of the railroads. This message looks at the entire transportation industry and its basic purpose is to develop an over-all policy for every element involved in this part of our economic life. It is the first time that this has been attempted by the Chief Executive.

In laying the foundation for the recommendations the President says: "A chaotic patchwork of inconsistent and often obsolete legislation and regulation has evolved from a history of specific actions addressed to specific problems of specific industries at specific times. This patchwork does not fully reflect either the dramatic changes in technology of the past half-century or the parallel changes in the structure of competition." Those may appear to be harsh words, but actually they are mild in view of the present situation of our transportation industry.

Scores of recommendations are made by the President. They fall under four main heads: intercity transportation; urban transportation; international transportation; and labor relations and research. By far the longest of these is that on intercity transportation. This is as it should be because here we have railroads, trucks, airlines, buses, and the inland waterways. The present complexity of the competition and regulation of these various systems is almost beyond comprehension. Some of them are recipients of government subsidies and some are not, and the methods by which they are taxed are about as varied as human ingenuity can advise. To bring order out of this chaos will take the wisdom of Solomon and the patience of Job, but it has to be attempted.

The second longest section of the message is devoted to recommendations on urban transportation. This involves the whole gamut of public systems, and in addition the problem of private cars, taxis, and so forth. Some cities have done a reasonable job in meeting their difficulties, but others have made practically no progress. And by and large all of them want federal financial assistance for their programs. The President wants "a long-range program of federal aid to our urban regions for the revitalization and needed expansion of public mass transportation."

In the international field the main transportation problems, as seen by the President, are whether our ships and aircraft are adequate to meet "probable military emergencies" and why, even with federal building subsidies, our merchant marine does not grow more rapidly and be better able to compete with foreign ships. No specific recommendations are made in the field, but the Secretary of Commerce, and various other government officials are directed to make surveys with a view of finding out what should be done.

On labor relations and research the message has little to say. The main burden of the comments is that labor must not be hurt; that collective bargaining must be used to "promote efficiency"; and that we must have a "vigorous, continuous and coordinated program of research."

Obviously this is a really long rang program. Its strength lies in the fact that it is an attempt to correct some of the disgraceful rules now in force. Its weaknesses are that it will involve still more federal spending, that it does nothing to eliminate the many bad labor practices, and that it injects the central government still further into problems which can and should be solved at the local level.

Negroes Call Off Boycott In Edenton

The Rev. F. H. LaGarde, regional representative of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and Golden A. Frinks, supervisor of the NAACP Youth Council, on Thursday jointly announced that the economic boycott of the downtown area of Edenton has been called off.

The reason for calling off of the boycott was to create a quiet, peaceful and friendly atmosphere so that negotiations with the merchants pertaining to fair employment practices could proceed in good faith. The downtown area of Edenton has been boycotted for the past five weeks. It was reported to be at least 51% effective by a NAACP spokesman.
