PUZZLER — Wilfred puzzles experts at the San Diego Zoo. A gift from Borneo, he resembles a civet cat, a genet and a mongoose, but has not yet been identified.

weiner roast; it was the last of everything for the forty-three students that were graduating.

Tonight would be the last time she would ever walk through those front doors as a student again.

Tonight when she takes her diploma and shakes hands with the superintendent of the school, she will step from a school girl, who had been safe in the hall-lowed hall, into the world of a grown woman, and the big wide world full of every-day problems for her to face.

Yes, tonight would end her world of childish dreams and push her into the world of reality.

She looked around the dimly lighted room one last time. She then walked slowly to the front door and went out.

When she walked out of the school building a handsome young man came up to her.

"Jane, I've been looking all over for you. Where have you been?" he asked.

She looked up in his handsome face and smiled through her tears as they ran down her cheeks, then she said:

"Remember old times, Tommy, and shedding a few tears for graduation, on this my Graduation Day."

A Tear For Graduation

By FLORA JANE WARD, Tyner, N. C.

In the dimly lighted room sat a lonely figure of a girl. Her head was in her hands as she studied the desk top. The room was crowded with some forty odd desks, lined neatly in five long rows. Each desk faced a larger desk, which had books standing neatly together in a row. The black boards were washed all neat and clean, the chalk trays were spotless, the erasers were clean and all the chalk had been placed in a box, in the closet, which stood in the back of the room.

The light in the room was growing dimmer as the sun began to set. The girl got up and went over to the window. As she looked out she saw her class and their guests, out at the fireplace that stood next to the lunch room.

She had slipped away from the rest of the crowd, so she could be alone and to think. She knew after everyone had eaten, that they all would go home and dress for tonight.

As her eyes traveled the school campus, she began to remember things that had happened in the past wonderful twelve years.

She remembered that morning when she and fifty-nine other six year-olds had started to school. She had been so excited that she had been the first one off the bus.

Then as the years went on, there had been the play in the sixth grade. She had played the lead part.

Then as the years wore on, she had graduated into high school. That first year in high school, there were sixty-three of them in the ninth grade.

The highlights of high school were many. She had joined the Glee Club and had made many new friends. She had entertained at the Junior Play. Another highlight of her junior year was the Junior-Senior Banquet and Prom.

The members of the class had dwindled down to forty-five. Everyone had passed and so this year all forty-five of the eager juniors had walked into the senior home room and were classed as dignified seniors. They were being looked up to now by the giggling freshmen, the same way they did when they had been freshmen.

The highlights of the senior year had been many and all many and all wonderful. All the wonderful home basketball games she had gone to, all the candy and cake chances she had helped sell, the trip to New York, the Junior-Senior Banquet and Prom, at which they had been the guests instead of the hosts.

She remembered all the parties that the members of her class had given, and just a few days ago, they all had gone to a wonderful Class Night Party in honor of their parents. Now tonight was the last

Sunday School Lesson

THE FELLOWSHIP OF LOVE
International Sunday School Lesson for June 3

Memory Selection: "Let us not love in word or speech but in deed and in truth."—I John 3:18.
Lesson Text: I John 3:11-18; 4:7-21; 2 John; 3 John.

The purpose of our study today is to help adults see that love is the mark of a Christian, and to encourage them to practice this love in all their relationships.

The three Letters of John were of three types: (1) general, or to all Christians everywhere; (2) those addressed to a specific church; (3) personal letters to individuals. First John, with positive teachings regarding God's nature, refutes the heresies of Docetism and Gnosticism. Second John warns against heretical teachers. Third John pleads for hospitality for traveling evangelists.

One can hardly read the First Epistle of John without being impressed by the oft-repeated statements about love: "God is love." "Me who does not love does not know God." "Perfect love casts out fear."

It is very important that we should understand the nature of the love so frequently mentioned in this Letter. (The kind of love referred to is not the personal, one-person-to-another kind of love that exists between sweet-hearts and families. It is, rather, a voluntary, active affection that links God and man and unites soul with soul. It implies reciprocity—if not actually existing, then desired and sought after. It covets for others the same well-being and success that one wants for oneself. This kind of love is not sweet sentiment, but a whole-souled identification of oneself with the needs and interests of other people.

At the time this Letter was written certain people called Docetists and Gnostics were claiming that they knew God in a way that ordinary people did not. They were so sure that they knew the nature of God that they decided that God himself did not actually live as is

The traditions of America are inseparably linked with religion, and the Church has been the most powerful factor in our national life. Its faith has inspired our highest achievements.

The influence of religion has sanctified our homes and fostered in them the solid virtues and strong faith which have molded our national character and shaped our course in world history.

Our public school system is the outgrowth of religious zeal and the desire of the Church to spread enlightenment among the people. It has invoked blessings on those who train our youth.

The home, the school, and the Church—these are the great triumvirate whose faithful and tireless efforts have made America the most favored land on earth. They are the pillars of our strength, the foundation of our hope.

Let us cling to these elements of national strength—make our homes the abode of happiness; make our schools centers of light and knowledge; and make God our guide as we move into the untrod future.

How to keep a cool party line all summer

Just keep your calls brief—give everyone an equal chance to make and receive calls. Your party line will be "cool" and your telephone neighbors won't be "hot under the collar." This means better service for everyone... including you.
