

The Roundup

By WILBORNE HARRELL

I wonder at the attitude of the Seniors now graduating all over the land. Will they look upon their graduation as a release from study, from toil, from grinding work, as a release from behind bars as a prisoner who is given his liberty? Or will their attitude be as one passing through the school portals to enter a new world, a wonderful new land to conquer and make their own, and a challenge to joyfully accept? On their outlook on life when the last words of the baccalaureate sermon have been delivered, will depend their future place in the world, their happiness and their success.

PHILOSOPHER SAYS—It takes an old maid to show how to correctly diaper a baby.

When Scott Carpenter in the Aurora 7 successfully orbited the earth three times, the United States achieved another milestone in the space race, and placed us one step nearer the moon and outer space. Carpenter's orbital carousel was a heavenly merry-go-round that for drama and suspense added another new star in America's galactic triumphs. For all the world to witness, by the medium of radio and television, the drama was played out, alive, as they say in broadcasting circles. It was not a performance which we acquainted the world after the fact, but an on-stage production—if we had failed, our failure would have instantly become universal knowledge. We gambled on success with the world looking on — and won. Which points up the way Americans do things, in comparison with other powers who shroud everything in a cloak of mystery that leaves doubt over the whole procedure.

Seeing the Cupola House being repaired, I am beginning to wonder how much of the original house is still intact. Many years have passed since the house was built, and much repairing must have been done during this time. Eventually there won't be much of the original building left. Which reminds me of the story of a man who had a barrel, which he claimed had been in his family for several hundred years. Of course, he explained, new staves had been added from time to time, and new hoops and new heads. When asked what was left of the original barrel, he blithely replied, "Oh, the barrel still has the same bung-hole."

still he was chosen to perform this great feat. And he did his job well. He had great ability though it was not recognized in him until he had a chance to prove himself.

Yes seniors, you that made high grades deserve congratulations but let's not forget the others. Whatever God has given you whether it be a high IQ, or the ability to use your hands well, use your talent to its fullest. Remember God knows what you can do much better than man, therefore man's judgment is far from being final concerning your abilities.

This Is The Law

INHERITANCE LAWS

A person who dies without a will is said to die "intestate." The state has to step in with its "intestate laws" and make a distribution of his property.

If a person doesn't like the intestate laws, he can make a will and dispose of his property in any way he wishes.

The paragraphs below are summarizations of some of the more important provisions of the Intestate Succession Act of North Carolina.

1. If a husband or wife is survived by a spouse and only one child, the real and personal property is divided equally between the surviving spouse and the child. (If the child is dead leaving issue, then the issue takes his share).

2. If a husband or wife is survived by a spouse and two or more children, the surviving spouse takes one-third of the real and personal property and the children, or their lineal descendants, take the other two-thirds of the real and personal property.

3. If a husband or wife is survived by a spouse and is survived by neither children nor issue of children but leaves parents and brothers and sisters, the surviving spouse takes one-half of the real property and the first $10,000 in value of the personal property plus one-half of the remainder in personal property; the parents take one-half of the real property and the other one-half of the remainder of personal property. The brothers and sisters do not take anything.

4. If a husband or wife is survived by a spouse and is survived by neither children nor issue of children, nor a parent, but leaves brothers and sisters, the surviving spouse takes all of the real and personal property.

5. If a person is not survived by a spouse but is survived by lineal descendants (children or lineal descendants of deceased children), all of his real and personal property will go to his lineal descendants.

6. If a person is not survived by a spouse or lineal descendants but is survived by both parents, they take in equal shares his entire estate, or if either parent is dead, the surviving parent takes the entire estate.

7. If a person is not survived by a spouse, lineal descendants or by a parent, his entire estate will go to his brothers and sisters and the lineal descendants of any deceased brothers and sisters if there be any.

8. If a person is survived by no spouse, lineal descendants, parents, brothers and sisters, or lineal descendants of deceased brothers and sisters, then one-half of the estate goes to paternal aunts and uncles or to lineal descendants of such aunts and uncles. The second half of the estate goes to the maternal side of the family in the same manner. If there are representatives of only one side of the family surviving, then they take all.

9. If no person can be found entitled to inherit under the Intestate Succession Act, then all of the decedent's property will escheat to the University of North Carolina.

To do good to all because we love all, and to use in God's service the one talent that we all have, is our only means of adding to that talent and the best way to silence a deep discontent with our shortcomings. —Mary Baker Eddy.

Especially To Seniors

By TERRY JONES

Once again the time has come when the graduating classes have bid farewell to the old Alma Mater and stepped out into an entirely new world. Soon they will separate probably to never really reunite again.

In the graduating class there are always those who have accomplished a great deal in their studies and everyone is giving them praise for a job well done. But what about the seniors who were just average or even the ones that didn't do anything outstanding? Are they to sink into the background and listen to the praise the others receive?

Once there was a student who did not do well as far as school was concerned. He couldn't keep up with the "A" students. Yet, in later years when this man entered the business world he did extremely well. Today he employs some of those students in his class who far surpassed him in grades. Now he is boss over them.

Astronaut Malcolm Carpenter who recently orbited the earth three times for the U. S. was always labeled as a failure throughout his boyhood. He flunked out of college twice but

When Peanut Insects Attack

SEVIN is a registered trade mark of Union Carbide Corporation.

Long-lasting insect control with fewer applications per season makes SEVIN economical. It stops many kinds of insects, including worms, leafhoppers, thrips, bean leaf beetle, blister beetles, stink bugs, velvet bean caterpillar and grasshoppers.

Reduce drift hazards by using SEVIN. When you follow label directions, SEVIN can be used on more than 50 crops close to harvest, so drift is hardly a problem. Residue from drift or application to nearby livestock forage does not show up in milk or meat of the animals.

Peanut hay can be fed to livestock even if SEVIN is used to the day of harvest to control late-season worms.

SEVIN is safer to handle than many insecticides. Spray and dust operators like it.
