

Children Versus Parents

By TERRY JONES

"Children, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right. And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath." (Words of Paul taken from Ephesians 6 verses 1 and 4).

Never has there been a society of people that needs the right influence of the home more than we the people of this new age. Children and parents live in two separate worlds when they both need each other. Children need the love and guidance that only a parent can give; parents need the security and serenity that only a home and family can bring. However, the American home seems to be going just the opposite way. A mutual understanding between parent and child seems to be vanishing. If little Johnny brings his most important question to his mother and she passes it off as a trifle then she has let him down. Parents should never forget that children have problems that seem very important to them and these problems deserve careful thought and consideration. If a parent will listen and try to understand a small child's great questions of life then he will still seek help from his parents. On the other hand if the young person can't confide in his parents then he may keep it to himself or seek help from some unhealthy source such as trash literature.

The Bible, which is still as up to date as the latest Psychology book, tells children to obey their parents and to honor them. Once there was a girl that mocked her mother's plea not to go swimming—and she drowned. So many times in school I would hear teenagers refer to their parents in some slang disrespectful way. Children should never forget that often parents sacrifice a great deal for them. The Bible also says for parents not to provoke their children to anger. A parent is to guide but never to be a ruling lord over his child pushing them out into society. This only causes rebellion that results in inner anger that may be kept down until adulthood freedom comes. Thousands of young people are classed as "good clean young people" until they are free of parental rule then the rebellion that stored up through the years bursts out.

God's Word goes ever farther in saying, "But bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." In other words train them in the ways of God and teach the child God's rules of life. What are parents of today handing their children? It is a poor parent that will give his child world possessions that will fade away and no spiritual guidance to lead him in a sin-sick world.

As a parent you owe your child love, respect and spiritual guidance. Children you owe your parents honor and obedience. Every home should have a family altar where they can read God's Word daily and talk to Him. A home without an altar is worse off than a home with no kitchen.

SENATOR Sam Ervin SAYS

Washington — The Senate Agriculture Committee has reported a modified farm bill which retains only one of the rigid controls on farm commodities sought by the Agriculture Department. This provision would retain rigid controls on wheat. The Senate Committee bill extends for one year the current program for government feed grains payments based on voluntary controls by farmers. Earlier this session, the Senate passed a bill recognizing that if we are going to have price supports for agricultural commodities we are going to have to impose controls, too. Thereafter, the House rejected rigid controls, and recently passed a bill to continue voluntary controls that thus far have not worked very successfully. The Senate is confronted with the problem of whether it is going to adopt the House bill which relies on voluntary controls for wheat and feed grains, or re-draft substantially the former Senate bill on this subject. Very likely this will precipitate a battle in the Senate.

Trade Aid—On July 24th the House adopted a conference report on the $4.6 billion foreign assistance authorization bill. It thus cleared the bill for Presidential consideration. The bill as agreed on by the Senate and House after conferences modified the ban on aid to Communist countries such as Poland and Yugoslavia. A peculiar sidelight of this problem is that Yugoslavia now is conducting its own foreign aid program. It has extended aid to Indonesia of some $10 to $15 million. Indonesia has been threatening to expel our ally, the Dutch, from Dutch New Guinea. Records show that our foreign aid to Yugoslavia in the last several years has exceeded Yugoslavia's own foreign aid programs to other countries. In effect, the American taxpayer is financing foreign aid which Yugoslavia extends to other countries and which draws neutralist governments toward Yugoslavia.

In the face of a growing concern about the American economy and its ability to remain vital in the world market, it is small wonder that American taxpayers are voicing amazement that the Federal Government continues to pour out dollars all over the face of the world. I am told that even our Western Allies express concern at our attempt to dole out dollars to nearly every nation on earth. This has led some American economists to voice strange maxims such as the one that we no longer need worry about the amount of our national debt which now hovers around the $300 billion mark.

The Senate Finance Committee is now holding hearings on the proposed Trade Expansion Act of 1962. These hearings are tentatively scheduled to continue until about the middle of August. In the remaining days of the 87th Congress, the Senate will have an opportunity to consider both the Trade Bill and the Foreign Aid Appropriation Bill. The critical test on the Foreign Aid bill is always over the amount of appropriations voted rather than the amount authorized. That vote on that test will come up in the weeks ahead. Both programs are getting an increasing amount of attention by citizens interested in the economy of this nation. Indiscriminate foreign aid programs have for years had a great bearing on the tax problem and the national debt. The Trade Expansion Act may have an equal bearing on the jobs of Americans.

It is an appropriate time to look and see whether we are going to give first priority to the needs of our own national economy before we give continued attention to the governments of other lands.

GLIDEN CLUB MEETS

The Gliden Community 4-H Club held its regular meeting on July 16. Janette Bunch, acting president, called the meeting to order. The group stood and repeated the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag and the 4-H pledge. Christine White had the devotion and the Rev. Warren Rollins led the group in prayer. The roll was called and the minutes read and approved. The floor was opened for business. An assistant secretary and treasurer, Annette Bunch, was elected. The Rev. Warren L. Rollins gave out the record books and a demonstration was given by Judy Evans and Kay Bunch. The demonstration was entitled, "Ice Cream Dressed Up." Everyone enjoyed the demonstration very much. Mrs. Marvin Evans then gave a very informative demonstration on keeping longtime record books. The meeting was then adjourned and refreshments were enjoyed by all.

Negro Home Demonstration News

By MRS. ONNIE S. CHARLTON, County Negro Home Economics Agent

Last week, you recall, was National Farm Safety Week. The theme: Family Safety — at Work and Play. Accidents do involve people. It would be well for each of us to make the theme a year-around goal. The Secretary of Agriculture, Orville L. Freeman, urges farm residents to "weed out careless, accident inviting habits, this would be a big step in making our farms and highways safer. But concern for safety must be a year-around project if we are to conquer the accident problem."

The National Safety Council lists these suggestions concerning farm machinery: Wear simple, close-fitting work clothes. Always turn off machinery before adjusting, unclogging or servicing.

Always keep shields and guards in place when operating. Refuel machinery only when the motor is off and has cooled. Take a short break every few hours to forestall fatigue.

The National Safety Council also states that, farm people travel mostly on rural highways where three-fourths of all motor vehicle deaths occur, and they list these keys to defensive driving: Obey All Traffic Regulations. Only the immature and incompetent think they can safely ignore speed limits, "no passing" rules, stop signs, and other traffic control measures.

Be Alert At All Times. Dangerous situations develop fast. Be doubly watchful after dark. Remember to glance at the rear-view mirror frequently. Allow A Margin Of Safety. Good drivers never assume that other drivers or pedestrians will don't insist on their right-of-way at all costs. Follow the car ahead at a safe distance. This is obviously a matter of judgment, but there is a good rule of thumb to use as a guide — Allow at least one car length for every 10 miles per hour of speed — that is, at least three car lengths at 30 miles an hour, four at 40, and so on.

Make Your Intentions Clear. Before stopping, turning, changing lanes, or other maneuvers that may affect nearby traffic, give proper signals and make sure the way is clear. Stay In One Lane As Much As Possible. Don't weave or hog the road. Cross center line only when passing or turning left. Prepare For Turns And Stops. Get into the proper lane well in advance and signal. Keep An Eye On Parked Cars. Watch for signs indicating that a vehicle may be about to pull out from the curb.

Pace Yourself By The Traffic Around You. Don't race. Don't lag. Don't ride the bumper of the vehicle ahead. Don't Back Into Trouble. When you back up, make certain the way is clear. Reduce Your Speed At Night. Don't override your lights. Use your passing beam, even if the other fellow doesn't. Keep your windshield, headlights, and tail-lights clean.

Keep Your Self-Control. Never lose your temper at other drivers or drive recklessly to "let off steam".

Always Be Courteous On The Road. The Golden Rule is the most important adjunct to the official traffic rules.

The past, with its guilt, with its hypocrisy and its hollowness, its lying conventionalities, and its pitiful cowardice, shall lie behind us like a museum. —Henrik Ibsen.
