A LIFT FOR TODAY

Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth.—Matthew 5:5.

It was pride that changed angels into devils; it is humility that makes men as angels.—Augustine.

Our loving Heavenly Father, may we through repentance and humility see the heavenly countenance of our Saviour.

You Can't Have The Cake And Eat It, Too!

A drastic change in the schedule of trash and garbage collections is scheduled to go into effect in Edenton Wednesday, July 1.

For many years the Edenton Street Department has attempted to cover the entire town every day in collecting trash and garbage. This schedule has been carried out except in some instances when equipment was broken down or when there was absolutely more trash and garbage along the streets than could be collected in one day.

The town has grown and there obviously is more trash and garbage put out to be collected. So that the situation at present is that if every day collections are to be continued over the entire town, means that more equipment will be needed plus the fact that more men will have to be employed in order to properly perform all of the town's work. So the action taken by Town Council to curtail collections was a move in the direction of economy, and had some bearing on being able to maintain the $1.00 tax rate, which was approved by the Councilmen at their special budget meeting held Tuesday night.

The change in schedule has been considered a number of times during the years by Town Council, but because of opposition, no action was taken until recently.

The new schedule will, of course, be unwelcome on the part of some citizens. However, Edenton has been the only one, or possibly among the precious few towns in North Carolina which still has trash and garbage collected every day.

It is hoped Edenton citizens will cooperate to the fullest in carrying out the new schedule, which appears in an advertisement in this issue of The Herald.

Edenton is growing and with this growth various changes must, of course, be made. It is nice to have trash and garbage collected every day, but it is also nice to have a tax rate of $1.00 instead of say $1.50. We cannot have our cake and eat it, too.

Vacations Are For Fun

This is the season when "vacation" becomes a household word, when dreams and discussions turn into reservations and road maps. The traditional toss-up between mountains and shore went out with the Model T. Modern transportation makes the world your oyster — or are you allergic to shellfish? Still, vacation plans are formed as much by physical considerations as by financial ones.

Certain locations or activities are out if, say, Junior has hay fever, or Judy gets sea-sick eyes in the bath tub. Vacation is no time to be sick or to tempt fate.

Because approximately one out of every five households has a member with some form of cardiovascular ailment — including high blood pressure — the North Carolina Heart Association offers some suggestions to help you make vacation time safe and pleasant for all members of the family.

The person with a chronic ailment should visit his physician before a vacation. Tell the doctor about your vacation plans, where you intend to go, how you intend to get there. For example, if you're flying, most commercial airlines have pressurized cabins, and can offer special diets or oxygen if needed, but it's best to make sure in advance.

Climate and altitude are two important factors to keep in mind, the North Carolina Heart Association says. High altitudes, with their oxygen-poor air, can make persons with some heart and respiratory ailments feel miserable. Heat and humidity add to the work of the heart because the cardiovascular system plays an important part in helping the body to adjust to weather extremes.

If you find yourself at a high altitude or in an excessively hot and humid area, rest a few days in order to give your body a chance to adjust to its surroundings before you start strenuous sports or sightseeing. Eat lightly of nourishing foods. Don't get over-tired. Take short rests. Dress comfortably.

If you require medication, take enough to see you through the trip. And just in case

Heard & Seen By Buff

Earl Smith's store in the Rocky Hock section was, without doubt, the most popular place in Chowan County Tuesday night. Earl put on a special, which was his annual fish fry special, and folks by the hundreds from all over the county were on hand to enjoy Earl's hospitality. As usual a group of Earl's friends helped to put on the fish fry among whom was Willie Saunders, who made himself generally useful. Then the Rev. Thurman Allred was all diked out with an apron and a cook's hat as he watched and turned the cornbread. Charlie Peele did his stuff in mixing the cornmeal, jabbing his hand and arm far down in the lard can so that the stuff was properly mixed. Gus Bunch, usually on the eating end of feeds, was busy chopping onions for the cornbread. Then Sid White and a group of other men were busy as a dog scratching fleas in frying the fish. A group of ladies served the long lines of hungry people and a few boys were kept busy pulling caps off soft drink bottles. Obviously, all who attended the fish fry enjoyed the annual affair, but none were any happier than Earl himself, who milled through the crowd with a smile from ear to ear. The only unfortunate angle to the fish fry, so far as I'm concerned, was that there was a special meeting of Town Council at about the same time the fish fry was going on. Of course, I should have remembered that a special meeting was called at the regular Town Council meeting, but usually the gals in the town office remind me and they failed to remind me Tuesday. It was a case of forgetting pure and simple and I hope I'll not be charged with being derelict in my duty. Which emphasized the fact that as a fellow gets older his memory becomes shorter. Anyway, I missed Mayor John Mitchener's midnight helping of ice cream, but I got a belly full of fish out at Earl Smith's store — and so did a lot of other folks. I was wondering why some of the Town Councilmen were not seen in line to be served at the fish fry.

Leroy Heninger was among the group of National Guardsmen who returned home over the week after spending two weeks in training at Fort Bragg. Leroy told me they underwent strenuous field training, but that they also were obliged to engage in other forms of fighting. The latter had to do with combating red bugs and ticks. He happened to bring home one of the ticks, but that tick is now "daid".

Mrs. Stanton Harrell of Route 2, is convinced that Herald advertising pays and so does C. R. Ward of Route 1, Hertford. Mrs. Harrell last week advertised that she had some puppies she would give away and it wasn't long until they were all gone. She said it was the best 60-cent investment she ever made. Maybe she should have had a dozen puppies to give away instead of only six. Then Mr. Ward advertised some farm equipment for sale and some of this was sold through Herald advertising, and he placed another ad in this week's Herald.

Here's one who joined the Bermuda shorts gang over the week-end. Despite spindle legs, protruding blood veins and scarred shins, the extremely hot weather convinced me that it was made comfortable to wear shorts instead of long pants. Of course, I didn't venture far from home—especially during the daylight hours.

And speaking about the hot weather, the Rev. E. C. Shoaf, pastor of the Methodist Church, announced Sunday that he wanted, his congregation to be as comfortable as possible and that it was not a "sin" for men to take off their coats during the service if they so desired. Which means, fellows, that we'll have to be wearing a clean shirt and one which has no slits in it.

Thanks to my friend E. F. Hettrick, who lives in Atlanta, Ga., I received the initial copy of "The Atlanta Times". It is a new newspaper in Atlanta which is issued four times daily and on Sunday. It will compete with the Atlanta Constitution and Atlanta Journal, published by Ralph McGill and Eugene Patterson. The first issue comprises six sections and 128 pages and 175,000 copies. If your pill box goes overboard or gets lost, ask your physician to make out an extra prescription blank to keep in your wallet.

Most people with chronic ailments have learned to live with them and know what they can and cannot do safely. In many ways, they are better off than their apparently healthy kinsman who hasn't had a physical examination in years and has no idea of his physical capacity or limitations. Many of these people, accustomed to soft living during the year, plunge into a frenzied vacation round of over-eating and over-exertion that can lead to trouble. And, after all, vacations are to come back from.

were printed. James C. Davis is the publisher and if the first issue is any indication, The Atlanta Times will be among the nation's best newspapers. Of course, I didn't have time to read the entire paper, but I want to thank Mr. Hettrick for sending it to me.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Elliott returned home Sunday night from a week's trip to Bermuda, a trip J. D. was awarded by the Home Security Life Insurance Company for outstanding performance. J. D. says the trip was wonderful and if it was not for the fact that he gets his bread and butter here, he would like to live on the popular and beautiful island.

And speaking about eating, members of the Chowan County Scottish Rite Club held a steak supper at Kermit Layton's Sandy Point Beach Friday night. The ladies were guests, the men did the cooking and they had to admit that the steaks were just about as good as they had ever eaten. Then, too, the supper was made more enjoyable for the ladies, for all they had to do was to sit down and eat. W. M. Rhoades, Harry Spruill, R.

T. Pickler and Tom Francis were the "cooks". Henry Quinn played a tape recording which proved to be an indigestion preventive.

It is to be regretted that an error occurred in the story of Mrs. Zene Elliott's death, too late to be corrected. We were given the name of Miss Arrowzene Elliott, but after the section carrying the death was printed, we were informed that the second name is Arrovena. Wish such a thing was possible not to make mistakes.

Dan Moore sets the record straight on 3 important issues

TOBACCO:

"The intensity and gravity of the present situation is unequalled in the history of the tobacco industry. I feel very strongly that never before has the need for positive leadership in a crisis been more obvious.

"When elected governor of North Carolina, I will continue my interest in the welfare of the tobacco farmers and will fight constantly to maintain a sound tobacco program.

"As I have gone across North Carolina, I have made it a point to talk personally with representatives of all phases of the tobacco industry, with farmers, with the president of the state's largest farm organization, with the Commissioner of Agriculture and members of the marketing division of the Department of Agriculture, with tobacco warehousemen, with dealers and exporters of tobacco, and with representatives of the buying companies. I have talked with literally thousands of tobacco farmers throughout North Carolina. All these people have one common goal: Maintaining a sound and profitable tobacco industry in North Carolina. As Governor of North Carolina, I would devote my full efforts to this end."

The above statement was made by Dan Moore Monday in Greenville. But months ago, long before the present tobacco crisis erupted, Dan Moore had established a program for protecting tobacco and tobacco farmers in North Carolina. In fact, the first committee of farmers in North Carolina that became interested in the campaign for Governor was formed in behalf of Dan Moore.

For the past several days, Dan Moore's opponent has been doing a lot of talking about tobacco. He has attempted to project himself as a tobacco expert and to make a political football out of a grave situation facing thousands of North Carolinians. Many tobacco farmers will remember, however, that Rich Preyer only a few weeks ago clarified his knowledge of tobacco and the problems of tobacco farmers when he told a chamber of commerce gathering in Wilson that "The only thing he knew about tobacco was that he had represented a client who had been hit on the head with a tobacco stick."

RURAL ELECTRIFICATION:

Dan Moore, has stated, not just once but on many occasions, that he would never be a party to the liquidation of our Rural Electric Cooperatives. He sees no need for placing them under the N. C. Utilities Commission. He recognizes their significant contribution to the growth of this state and would do nothing to impair the services they are providing. Dan Moore believes the REA's and the investor-owned power companies can continue to operate in harmony, providing electric service to their customers.

INTEREST RATES:

Dan Moore has pledged to vigorously oppose any increase in interest rates. Legal interest rates are established by the Legislature and are not influenced by the Governor. His opponent has charged that Dan Moore would appoint Lewis R. (Snow) Holding, president of First Citizens Bank and Trust Company to the banking commission if he is elected. The fact is, Mr. Holding has been a member of the Banking Commission since 1961. He was appointed by Governor Sanford.
