

Around The Farms In Chowan County

By C. W. OVERMAN, Chowan County Agent

Four Important Agricultural Referendums Next Tuesday: Peanut and cotton growers will vote in four referendums on peanut and cotton programs next Tuesday, November 28. For convenience of voters, there will be two polling places in each of the three designated ASCS communities covering the county.

The polling places in "A" community will be at the ASCS office in Edenton and Grover Cale's store in Advance. "B" community voters will go to Earl Smith's store in Rocky Hook or Rosser Bunch's store in Center Hill. Polling place in "C" community will be at Henderson Ray Peele's store near Ryland and L. C. Briggs' store at Gliden.

Voting is not only an American privilege; it is also an American obligation and responsibility. Study the issues involved, understand them, and vote. Peoples in many countries have lost their free vote and are now under dictator regimes because they neglected to understand issues and neglected to vote their convictions. Let's keep America strong by voting when we have a chance.

Peanut Referendum Issue: On Tuesday, peanut growers will vote on whether they want to continue peanut marketing quotas and allotments for the next three years—1966, 1967 and 1968. Peanut producers should consider the merits of this program and vote according to their desires.

Issues: On Tuesday, cotton growers will determine three important issues relating to cotton program legislation. For clearer study, let's consider each one separately.

Cotton Marketing Quotas And Allotments: Cotton growers will determine whether they want to continue marketing quotas and allotments for next year, 1966. Growers must consider the value of this program and vote accordingly.

The new cotton program involves several aspects too lengthy to explain here. It is designed to maintain producer income and reduce the cotton surplus in the United States.

Lease or Sale of Cotton Allotments Across County Lines: Under present legislation a cotton producer may lease or sell his cotton allotment to another cotton producer in the same county. The issue to be voted on determines whether cotton producers want to allow the lease or sale of cotton allotments across county lines.

At present, Chowan County cotton producers can only sell, purchase or lease cotton allotments from or to other cotton producers in Chowan County. If Chowan County cotton producers vote favorably on this issue, they may also purchase, sell or lease cotton allotments to or from producers in other counties which also vote favorably in North Carolina. In this issue each county stands on its own. If the county vote is not favorable, Chowan County cotton producers will not be able to so transfer cotton allotments with cotton producers in other counties.

Cotton Promotion Assessment Program: Cotton producers will also vote on whether they are willing to assess themselves 15 cents per bale to continue the cotton promotion program. This program is being administered by the North Carolina Cotton Promotion Association which is doing an excellent job.
