The Roundup

I hold no brief for the Ku Klux Klan, but a point or two may be made in extenuation of this organization. We of the South are becoming too prone to attribute all racial violence to the Klan, all cross-burnings and bombings. But the truth of the matter may readily be that the anonymity of the hood and the great secrecy of the Klan has given opportunity to hoodlums and criminals to take advantage of this for wreaking personal vengeance. This very anonymity is one of the things that makes the Klan dangerous. It is not the Klan as a legitimate organization, but the Klan as a cloak for non-Klansmen to hide their nefarious acts. And because of this we cry "Klan! Klan!" every time a racial crime is committed, and assume that a Klansman MUST BE CONVICTED if he is charged with such a crime, simply because he is a Klansman. We are in danger of letting our zeal for justice overcome common sense values. . . . Now on the other hand, my principal objection to the Klan is that it has out-lived its usefulness and its times. Modern society has no place for Brown Shirts, Black Shirts or White Hoods; no place for burning crosses or swastikas. The prevailing conditions during the reconstruction days of the South, that inspired Thomas Dixon to write THE CLANS-

MAN have no part of our modern life, or shouldn't. But yet the Klan has borrowed the techniques of that ancient Klan, and, wittingly or not, they have stolen a page from MEIN KAMPE, Adolph Hitler's justification of his actions, Nazism, and the Bible of Nazism. Therein lies a major danger of Klans: the relegation of the individual's right, regardless of race, creed or color, and the denial of the individual the enjoyment of those rights. Nazism or Klansism, I see very little difference between the two, in this respect. The Klan's antipathy toward races other than Caucasian or white closely parallels Hitler's white Aryan philosophy, or the supremacy of the white race. I quote from Mein Kampf (My Battle) by Adolph Hitler, "Everything that today we admire on this earth—science and art, technique and inventions—is only the creative product of a few peoples and perhaps originally of ONE race." Which obviously, to any thinking man, is grossly inaccurate. We only have to look about us to see the fallacy of this. The word Aryan had many Germanic facets and interpretations, but to Adolph Hitler, it meant, simply, " . . . a racial term excluding Jews and Negroes." Therein was the racial philosophy of Hitler and Nazism and my bone of contention with the Ku Klux Klan.
