

SOCIAL SECURITY Questions and Answers

George Dietrich, Field Representative of the Social Security Administration is in Edenton every Thursday and is located in the old Municipal Building.

Persons age 65 and over in Chowan County who are still working should take the necessary time to protect their social security interests, according to Thomas F. Wyatt, social security district manager at Greenville. "This advice," he said, "is directed to those who are eligible for social security but have not applied. They can no longer assume that no benefits are due them as long as they are working." The new "Medicare," Wyatt continued, can be used by those who work no matter how much income they have; an application, however, must be filed. To get the full protection offered at the earliest date, those who are now 65 or over, must apply no later than May 31, 1966.

The man or woman who is still working is just as likely, perhaps more so, to need the hospital and medical insurance protection as one who is retired.

"The name and addresses of those who have not applied are not known to us," Wyatt said. "Unless they act to protect their own interests, by applying without delay, they stand to lose part, or all, of the medical insurance protection available to them."

A single application, by a person insured under social security and now 65 or over, will establish his eligibility for: (1) Monthly benefits, when he retires; (2) Hospital insurance at no cost and (3) Medical insurance, if he chooses, for a $3.00 monthly premium starting next July.

In addition to the regular office hours, the district office at 207 Boyd Avenue in Greenville is open every Saturday from 8 to 12 noon.
