

Revival Slated At The First Assembly Of God

Revival services are announced for March 17-24 at First Assembly of God, Edenton, according to Rev. Hubert A. Morris. Speaker will be Rev. G. H. Altman of Fayetteville.

Mr. Altman felt a call and desire to do full-time Christian work in 1953. Leaving a lucrative marketing business, he attended Southeastern Bible College in Lakeland, Fla., graduating with a major in Bible and theology. Mr. Altman also graduated from Atlantic Christian College in Wilson with a B.A. degree in education. He has done post graduate work at N. C. State University in vocational guidance and psychology.

For five years, Mr. Altman served as youth director for the Assemblies of God in North Carolina. Following that he pioneered a church in Angier and pastored there for two and one-half years. For the past seven years, he has pioneered and pastored Calvary Assembly Church in Fayetteville.

Completing the revival services on March 24 will be Jim and Tammy Baker, daily favorites over WYAH television of Norfolk, Va.

Special music will be featured every revival service, which will begin at 7:30 P. M. There will be no Saturday night service. Mr. Morris extends this cordial invitation to the public to enjoy these inspiring services of the church.

REV. G. H. ALTMAN

We are all concerned with pollution of one sort or another. It may be air, water or something else. Yet with the tremendous strides being made to "clean-up" we hear the urgent cry for more attention to this area.

In talking with fishermen on the Chowan, we hear a great deal about the possible effects on the herring industry. Right now this river is running black from the discharge of lagoons of a pulp and paper company. Also, a dye plant discharges its cleaned-up waste into this same river. Add another chemical plant complex which is in the discussion stages plus the discharge of towns and cities and you have the beginning of a Giant Killer.

The Chowan is not the only river affected. It is but an example—a small example at best. The Neuse, the Cape Fear, any river anywhere, with its load of agricultural runoff carrying pesticides to a potent killer-like threat to a fisheries industry.

We need not think in terms of polluting only our waters or the air. We pollute the beauty of nature with trash heaved out car windows, debris left by the side of the road, or carelessly dumped in perhaps an out-of-the-way area.

Before our population became so great, our natural breakdown processes of rust, decay, scavenging and the like reduced these eye sores and potential threats to health to reasonable levels. Now mankind is ever so more abundant, and his waste products build up to mountainous proportions with startling rapidity. All this puts us in a rather disheartening situation. What is our hope? Where is our future?

There are some conventional methods of disposal available to us if we but use them. Under pressure of "Clean Stream Acts," "Highway Beautification" and "Resort Development" among others, we are attempting to get the situation back under control. Man has used the nearby woods or the waters of the world for his septic tank since man has walked the earth. The day is here when this must cease.

In our clean-up we should attempt those methods we know to work and are time-tested. However, this doesn't solve all the waste problems. Man is called upon to use his brainpower, his skill and resources - in developing new approaches.

A most imaginative Japanese has patented the idea of molding compacted waste into forms of high density covered on the outside with steel or other metals, or encased in cement for structural building materials. Novel, yes; it works, and it turns waste disposal into waste utilization.

When we become constructive in our approach to problems instead of sitting by and criticizing, we make progress. Now is a good time to start your own clean-up campaign, at plant, or shop, or home. You may recover a return on your "waste" as when you sell the metal scraps or wire cable to the junk yard. You will eliminate the eyesores, help decrease the pollution of different types and achieve a satisfaction of making it a more attractive world in which to live.

Durable Pastry

A certain small restaurant was kept by a man who prided himself on his cooking. He was amazed to hear a young salesman criticize a pie one day.

"Pie, young feller? Why, I made pies before you were born."
"O. K. But why sell 'em now?"
