Teaching Interns In Local Schools

GREENVILLE—Teaching interns from East Carolina University are now at work in school systems in nearly one-fourth of North Carolina's 100 counties.

Several of the students are doing their practice teaching in Edenton-Chowan Schools. They include: Mary A. Garrell of Hickory, fourth grade; Emma L. Jernigan of Colerain, sixth grade; Joy N. Page of Elizabeth City, second grade; Julia L. Small of Edenton, first grade, and Donna T. Sugg of Norfolk, Va., first grade.

Each intern is given a practice teaching assignment through the office of Dr. Thomas A. Chambliss. They conduct regular classes under the direction and supervision and get grades for on-the-job performances.

Senator Sam Ervin Says

WASHINGTON — This week we celebrate Law Day in our country at a time when turmoil and disrespect for the law seems in the ascendancy.

We have witnessed riots in more than one hundred cities, including the Nation's Capital, in recent days. Individuals have flaunted the authority of government. We have had slaughter, pillage and burnings which have caused incalculable damage to the lives, the property, and the attitudes of the people. In unmistakable terms, these events restate the necessity of preserving the "rule of law" which is the symbol of Law Day.

The challenge to the "rule of law" has become increasingly clear. Either we shall preserve the "rule of law" or we shall suffer the consequences of unparalleled chaos. When we recur to fundamental principles we find that the first obligation of any civilized society is the maintenance of law and order. The challenge to this obligation often comes in new phrases and in appealing ways. But it should be understood that when an individual chooses to decide for himself what laws he is going to obey and what laws he is not going to obey and receives public sanction for his conduct, we are witnessing the deterioration of the "rule of law". In truth, there is no right to disobey a law or to choose those laws which are to be obeyed. Moreover, the basic freedoms of every citizen are thereby imperilled when a government permits or condones conduct which is in violation of the law. Real freedom cannot exist without the protection of a government of laws.

Today, we find the "rule of law" challenged by impatient men who justify their conduct by saying that the end justifies the means. But witness what the means involves: terrorism, senseless destruction of the lives and property of others, and bitterness that is dividing the country.

In this hour, we should recall the advice of Abraham Lincoln when he said: "Let every American, every lover of liberty, every well-wisher to his prosperity, swear by the blood of the Revolution, never to violate in the least particular, the laws of the country. . . . Let every man remember that to violate the law is to trample on the blood of his father and to tear the character of his own and his children's liberty. . . ."

Our country must rebuild the attitude that no individual or group at any time, for any reason, has the right to extract self-determined retribution no matter how righteous their cause appears at the moment, for this is the credo of anarchy and the antithesis of freedom and liberty.

On this occasion, I make a renewed plea that we restore order to our society for justice cannot be obtained without order. Un-
