

Griffin Becoming Catawba Star

(Reprint from Raleigh News & Observer)
 By A. J. CARR
 Bill Griffin, Catawba's football and track star, seems to be proudest of his recent golfing feats.
 "I shot an 83 the other day," said the muscular 6-6, 242-pound sophomore. "Just got lucky, though. I've only played about 15 times in my life, but I really like that sport."
 Although Griffin has hardly played enough to know a 9-iron from a putter, his tee shots are already revealing some of Jack Nicklaus' blasts. The other day, he powered a drive 325 yards, barely missing a hole-in-one on a tough par 4.

 Anyway, the former Edenton prep hero isn't going to do a lot of worrying about the birdies and the bogeys right now, because football and track are still his games.
 When he slips into uniform, it's like Clark Kent donning his Superman suit. Spectacular things seem to happen to "Big Bill."
 As a freshman last year, he established a new Carolinas Conference records in the shot (49½ feet) and discus (134-2), but already this spring he has exceeded those marks by wide margins.

 That he has improved his shot toss to 50 feet, 9 inches and his discus fling to 144 feet, 5¼ inches comes as no surprise because Bill is strong enough and high skilled enough to do even better.
 "I've improved my form," explained Bill, who helped Catawba rifle to a quick 6-0 start in track. "The form has made the difference in the discus and the quickness in the circle has been the difference in the shot."
 Those record-breaking tosses become even more impressive because Griffin authored them with an injured back suffered in spring football practice and because he rarely has time to throw the shot and discus in the off-season.
 "It's getting better now, though," chirped Griffin. "I seem to be healing up all over. I'm trying to get ready for the AAU meet, and this Elvin Bethea of A & T."
 Although football comes first in the sporting life of Bill Griffin, he does not merely throw the shot and discus with the idea of letting them "fall where they may."
 Immediately after spring grid practice, he flits weights for two weeks and all during the track season he runs wind sprints and more wind sprints, and constantly strives to improve his form and quickness in the circle.
 "If he could concentrate on track more," said Coach William Faircloth, ex-Wake Forest footballer from Clinton, "he could probably get the shot over 60 and the discus up to about 175. He still needs to get quicker."
 Faircloth, an assistant football coach who shares track chores with basketball mentor Sam Moir, has started filming the Indian's performances, a move that has helped immensely.
 "I study the films," said Griffin. "It has really helped a lot. You can find out what you are doing then, see your form."
 Although Bill sparkles in a track uniform, he is more impressive in football gear.
 "The pro scouts are really looking him over," said Faircloth. "They think that in two years he will be one of the best tackles in the country."
 Bill Griffin has it all—strength, speed and stamina. He can dash 40 yards in 5.1 seconds in full football gear, a rate of speed many backs can't match.
 "I actually concentrate on football the most," noted Bill. "That's what I really want—to play professional football."
 Barring injury, he should realize that dream, and then, in later life, he might even begin to take the game of golf seriously, too.

Plans Are Made

MANTEO — Drama under the stars in a historical setting will again be presented on the fascinating Dare Coast-Outer Banks of North Carolina when "The Lost Colony" is staged for the 28th production season June 21 through August 25 on the Fort Raleigh national historic site.
 Except for special Sunday performances on August 18, the 381st anniversary of the birth of Virginia Dare, and on closing night, the show will be presented Monday through Saturday nights at 8:30 (EDT) in the Waterside Theater on the shores of Roanoke Sound. The theater seats 2,000 and there is a 600-car free parking area.
 Written by Pulitzer prize winner Paul Green of Chapel Hill, "The Lost Colony" will be directed and choreographed for the fifth consecutive season by Joe Layton of Broadway, TV and Hollywood fame. He was the choreographer of the original Broadway production of "The Sound of Music," won a Tony award for staging Richard Rogers' "No Strings," an Emmy award for the first of his three Barbra Streisand TV spectacles, and was responsible for the musical numbers of the motion picture hit, "Thoroughly Modern Millie."
 Paul Green's "evergreen" is staged on the site where Virginia Dare became the first child of English parentage born in the 16th century New World, more than 20 years before Jamestown and 30 years before Plymouth Rock. With a professional cast of nearly 100, plus another 35 or 40 off-stage technicians, the drama tells the story of the attempted settlement in the 1580's by Sir Walter Raleigh's and the first Queen Elizabeth's colonists and their mysterious disappearance between 1587 and 1590.

DR. ALEX S. POW

WCU Will Get New President

CULLOWHEE—Dr. Alex S. Pow, vice president for academic affairs of the University of Alabama, has been elected by the board of trustees as president of Western Carolina University of Cullowhee.
 Dr. Pow will take office July 1, succeeding Dr. Paul A. Reid, president since 1949, who will retire June 30.

The election of Dr. Pow was recommended by a special committee of the board named last May to seek a new president. A faculty advisory committee joined in the unanimously made recommendation.

Dr. Pow, 49, is a native of Birmingham and holds degrees from the University of Alabama, the University of Denver and New York University. He will become the sixth president of Western Carolina University.

Jonathan H. Woody of Waynesville, board chairman, said Dr. Pow "is an educational statesman of the highest caliber. Not only Western Carolina but all of North Carolina can be glad and proud that he has accepted this position."
