

Around The Farms In Chowan

Weed Control For Peanuts: There will be no new herbicides for peanuts on the market this year but a new mixture, Enide plus Dinitro, will be available for the first time. Many growers in addition will make a new tank mix, Balan plus Vernam. The suggested rate for this mixture will be two quarts of Balan plus one quart of Vernam.

The mixture of Balan-Vernam has some advantages: Generally adequate nutgrass suppression and a longer period of grass control. Both of these herbicides, however, are weak in broadleaf weed control, and where this is a problem a cracking stage of post-emergence treatment ("piggy back") with other herbicides will be necessary.

During the past year, peanut growers in an effort to reduce or hopefully eliminate hoe labor adopted the "piggy back" treatment, i.e., using a post-emergence herbicide after having used a preplant herbicide. Just how much extra control this system provides is not yet known but our guess is that while percentage-wise the increased control may not be spectacular it may have been very beneficial. For example, if the preplant treatment gives 90 per cent weed control and the "piggy back" treatment raises this to 97 per cent it may make the difference between hoeing the peanuts or not hoeing them.

County Peanut Demonstrations 1968: Peanut variety and variety mixed demonstrations are being conducted with Marvin L. Evans of Rocky Hock community and David Bate-man of Cross Roads community. In these demonstrations, we are using separately NC-2, NC-5 Florigiant and Experiment No. 15717. We are also using one-half of each of these varieties mixed with one-half of another.

With C. M. Evans of Rocky Hock community we are comparing different rates and different time of applying landplaster to the NC-2 and NC-5 peanut varieties.

With A. C. Boyce of Yeopim community, we are conducting an all practice demonstration using the Florigiant variety with two acres following soybeans in 1967 and two adjoining acres following cotton in 1967.

1968 Cotton Variety Demonstration: Cotton variety demonstrations are being conducted with Fahey and Carroll Byrum of Cross Roads community. Cotton varieties being compared are Coker 413, Coker 201, Coker 7923, Experiment No. A67, Experiment No. TH149 and McNair 1032.

The all practice method of production is being followed in all the peanut and cotton demonstrations.

Fightin' Words

Eight of any ten girls don't have the right physical specifications, says a corset publication. Those are fighting words to eight of any ten boys.

Helpful Advice For Veterans

With spring in the air, the Veterans Administration today offered advice to veterans who, like thousands of other Americans, are thinking about buying or selling a home.

While Korean War veterans and certain World War II veterans are still eligible under the GI home loan program, the vast majority of veterans interested in securing a GI loan to buy a home are younger men.

W. R. Phillips, manager of the Winston-Salem Veterans Administration regional office. Of the 394,776 GI home loan applications received by the VA during the past two years, 302,311, or nearly 77 per cent, were from men who served after January 31, 1955. Last month the figure climbed to about 85 per cent with 15,270 of the 19,112 applications from veterans who served after the end of the Korean War.

For the veteran who is thinking of selling his home by allowing the purchaser to carry his GI loan, Phillips reminded him that he should protect himself by getting a release of liability from the VA.

Releases are issued if the new buyer—veteran or non-veteran—is a good credit risk and assumes all of the veteran's loan obligations.

Phillips pointed out, however, that a release from liability does not restore the veteran's eligibility for another GI loan.

Eligibility is restored only if VA is no longer liable to the lender on the guaranty and if the veteran disposes of the home for certain acceptable reasons, generally because he is forced to sell because of transfer or illness.

Homes repossessed by the VA are sold to veterans and nonveterans alike without regard to race, color or creed.

Further information on VA homes and GI home loans may be obtained from local VA offices.
