We fished for spots, which were all in one spot, along the fishing pier; too many sought spots, got their lines tied in knots and the cost of fishing was DEAR!

We really enjoyed fishing at the pier down at Nags Head this past Saturday. In fact, counting even the tiny ones, we caught 93 to be exact. However, we did catch some really nice spots and good-sized mullets. I noticed that my son was all to himself fishing and apparently contented—he was catching fish and keeping quiet about it, until someone else noticed, too, and it wasn't long until that spot on the pier was congested with fishermen, crossed lines and short tempers. Most people who are really fishermen are also good sports, who bear and forbear, with the more or less inexperienced angler and, believe me, it's exciting and fun.

There's a lot of excitement across the street at the Iredell House these days in the redecorating and beautifying of this historic home, getting ready for the big celebration coming up this weekend in connection with Historic Edenton's Visitor Center-Museum at the Barker House. For many months now, workers, under the direction of the local DAR Chapter, have been installing central heat, painting inside, really completely restoring this old historic home. All these restorations and interesting historic places make Edenton even a more wonderful place in which to live.

Here's a hint to most anyone, as we are all guilty at some time or another of throwing bits of fruit, seeds or peelings on the street or in other public places. This week I slipped on a seed of a peach or plum, thrown carelessly on a floor. Fortunately, I did not fall, but managed to twist myself a bit, causing soreness in my side for a couple days. Please try to remember, this sort of carelessness could cause a broken bone and lots of misery.

If you'll keep your eyes and ears open, you'll see and hear of so many people in our town who are completely unselfish in their everyday life, never asking for, and seldom getting the recognition they deserve. One lady I know, who works downtown in a store, never misses a chance to help someone or doing her bit to make someone's day just a little happier. Status in life or color of skin doesn't stop her from being friendly or helpful. Would that there were more people like—MAE TOPPING.

Did you ever try putting peeled hard boiled eggs in with pickled beets? Leave them there for a few days and they will be a beautiful color and very delicious—colorful for salads, too.

A Few Hints

Egg stained dishes will wash easier if a little Sale is put in them while they soak.

Substitute syrup from canned peaches for liquid called for in pancake batter.

Rubbing the hands with celery leaves will remove onion odors from fingers.

A slice of raw potato will remove vegetable stains from hands.

Certification

All farm operators in the county are responsible for certifying to the crops planted and land uses on farms they operate and/or delegate in writing the authority for someone else to certify on their behalf. The farms that are required to be measured for administrative control have already been selected by the county committee and delay of certification will have no bearing on whether the farm will be measured. All certification must be made by June 30, 1968, but the sooner certification is made, the earlier we will be able to compute final payments for cotton and feed grain.

CCC Grain Bins To Be Sold

Farmers who need additional storage for their small grain crop—and later on for soybeans and corn—should get in touch with the local ASCS county office for details about sales of excess CCC bins. A. C. Griffin, chairman, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation County Committee, said today.

Under a program similar to—but smaller than—last year's the Commodity Credit Corporation-owned grain storage bins started moving May 10 from mid-west states where they are no longer needed to 15 eastern and southeastern states, where there is a shortage of on-the-farm storage facilities. Shipment and sale of the bins—earlier than last year to meet the need for small grain storage space—is intended to help farmers gain more bargaining power in the market place.

Chowan County expects to receive about 10 of the bins for sale to farmers. The bins generally will be of the same type as last year, of 3,250 bushel capacity. Farmers eligible to buy the bins will certify that the bins will be used for storing and handling agricultural commodities.

Sale of the bins will be by competitive bids through public auction or sealed bids at not less than the established minimum price. Because of increased costs, the minimum will be slightly higher than last year, and it will take into consideration the value of the bins at the point of origin, dismantling cost and transportation. Sales will be for cash or through a storage facility loan if the farmer is eligible for one. The farm storage facility loans can cover up to 85 per cent of the out-of-pocket cost of approved structures needed to store price-support grains.

The exact date of the bin sales will be announced later.

"Time Marches On"

Seemingly to me, it was yesterday when my husband, John Jasper Barnes, and I so proudly went to Chowan Hospital and brought home with us a sweet little baby girl, five months old Vernetta Wood Barnes. My husband said we will take her and one day she might do us some good. I am the US, because the summer of 1960 he passed and left us alone. It was the height of his ambition as well as that of my mother and father, to see Vernetta graduate. Friday night, May 31st, at the D. F. Walker High School graduation exercises, I could not help but think of them when Vernetta so graciously received her High School Diploma.

Vernetta Wood Barnes

Allow me to say, be not alarmed about my mentioning the adoption. Vernetta is aware of it and very appreciative to the many friends who have helped her along the way. In the home she has proven to me more than a beautiful girl and I will miss her wherever she goes. May 26, 1968 she received a beautiful letter from Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Cox (old friends of the family). I want her to always cherish it and I give this portion which also expresses my sentiments. I quote: "Your parents have made it possible for you to reach your first goal in preparation for your most challenging career. As you pack your bag in preparation for college may you not forget to pack into your heart and mind the many beautiful things your parents have taught you all through the years. You will need every one of them. The prayers of your parents will not be enough to keep you when you are far away from them. So pray constantly for good health, courage, wisdom, understanding, dignity, respect for yourself and others, and unbounding faith in God." Unquote. Vernetta will always cherish these words, along with the many beautiful and useful gifts received from many friends of both races. She is more than grateful as well as surprised because just a few days ago it was your help that caused her to be crowned 1968 Queen of the Zeta Phi Beta Debutante Cotillion in the National Guard Armory at Windsor, North Carolina. Through your help she was able to realize

$1,001.22. Again accept our sincere thanks. She was told that for her work the college of her choice will receive $425.00 from the sorority. Hats off, not only to the 1968 Zeta Phi Beta Queen but also to the 1968 graduate. Vernetta has been affiliated with the Youth Choir, Junior Usher Board and Tharrington's Club of Kadesh A.M.E. Zion Church, secretary of the Girls Club, a branch of the Woman's Federated Club. When it comes to the school, she has held class office as Vice President and Assistant Secretary. She has been a band member since the beginning of the Fifth Grade.

I don't have to think, or wonder, about it because she left Mrs. Tamar Clark's room out of the Fourth Grade and joined the band. From the Fifth Grade until graduation, she used her own instrument. She has performed many times and many places for various groups with her beauty of movement with ballet and creative dancing. Nothing has been said about anything. My being a member of the staff has caused her to be deprived of many things. When teachers gave low grades they looked for me to say something but I fooled them because Vernetta is going to get where she's going.

It's a happy event, not only for you, but for all of your friends and your family, too. And this brings good wishes that day after day the best things in life will be headed your way!

YOUR MOMMY,
Mrs. Elizabeth Luton Barnes.
