A smile is my magic formula,
I try to use each day;
I'll guarantee that it will help
To make a MERRY CHRISTMAS day

I can think of so many ways to wish each of you a Merry Christmas, but none of my words will rhyme, but then I know my limitations, when it comes to poetry and beside that my mind is in a tizzy right now—so please try to smile and be happy if only for this one day—your smile just may make someone else's day a little brighter.

Someone sent me a treasured note this week and it certainly gave me a boost, just when I needed it most. The note was unsigned, but that doesn't matter either, and I do thank the friend who sent it.

Don't forget to feed the birds on Christmas Day—remember, they, too, are one of God's creations, bringing beauty and song in our lives. We are now enjoying the red birds, blue jays, the yellow grosbeaks, mockingbirds, finches and a Baltimore oriole came to visit us recently. So, even if it's only the lowly sparrow, feed them and soon you'll have more visitors.

Here's a different recipe for Cranberry Sauce:
1 lb. fresh cranberries.
2 cups sugar.
2 cups fresh apples (diced).

Dash of cinnamon.
2 cups water.
Bring water and sugar to a rapid boil, drip in washed cranberries and apples. Boil slowly until cranberries pop open.

Helpful Hints
You can make a disposable dustpan by cutting an aluminum foil pan in half. Badly soiled tiles can be cleaned by using one tablespoon of turpentine in a gallon of water.

For fluffier, longer lasting topping use confectioners sugar instead of granulated sugar to sweeten whipped cream.

Green peas will not shrink if a lettuce leaf is cooked with them.

Ladies, don't let your handbag rub against your fur coat. It's one of the major causes of wear.

To give extra zip to potato salad, add one-half cup vinegar to the water when boiling the potatoes.

Appeal Is Made In TB Campaign

The big day comes tomorrow when the local Christmas Seal Campaign reaches its high point with "Do-It-Day"—the day for putting good intentions into action and mailing in a Christmas Seal contribution to the Eastern Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, Box 542, Greenville.

"Do-It-Day serves as a reminder," says Edmund H. Harding, campaign chairman, "that while we are all busy preparing for a wonderful holiday season, there are those among us who need help because of TB and other respiratory diseases. And "Do-It-Day" gives emphasis to the fact that the success of the association's program depends largely upon the response of our Christmas Seal appeal."

Christmas Seal contributions are used for: Health and public education, support of medical education and research, patient services, community services, workshop scholarships for professional and non-professional workers, educational materials for distribution to schools, colleges, libraries, health departments, TV and radio stations, newspapers, etc.

Attaching Pay Is Last Effort

Some people would have you believe that revenue officers (collectors of delinquent federal taxes) are sadistic in attaching the wages of taxpayers. This belief, however, fails to touch base with the facts. Any revenue officer will tell you this: Attaching wages to satisfy overdue taxes is the most loathsome part of his work.

When a revenue officer levies on the wages of a taxpayer, he creates distaste in the eyes of the taxpayer and the employer as well. This is the result of levies; but it does not reflect the desire of the revenue officer or the service he represents. On top of this result, with each levy he serves a mountain of paper work is created, not just for IRS, but for the taxpayer's employer who is already red in the face with his normal payroll work.

Yes, the serving of levies is a business in which everybody loses: First, the taxpayer, then the taxpayer's employer and his government.

"... AND ALL THIS TOO!"—Postmaster James M. Bond is shown here checking in some of the 257 bags of sale catalogs which arrived at the local post office for delivery prior to Christmas. This added to the burden of mailmen but all were delivered on time.
