Given in marriage by her brother, Elwood Fahey Harrell of Elizabeth City, the bride chose for her wedding a gown of heavy bridal satin and imported Alecon lace. The empire styled bodice featured a portrait neckline and long sleeves. The gown and chapel length train were lavishly appliqued with lace and seed pearl loops with a fide border of lace finishing the hemline in scallops. She wore an imported mantilla of silk illusion and re-embroidered Alecon lace and carried a bouquet of pink sweetheart roses, white daisies and stephanotis.

Party Honors September Deb

They did their own thing on Saturday night.

That's right—at Mr. and Mrs. Leo Katkaveck's home on East King Street, Miss Ruth Bond Conger was graciously honored on the eve of her debut.

Bonnie's marshal, Frankie, and his parents, and Dr. and Mrs. Edward G. Bond hosted a fleet of Edenton young people at a hometown version of a psychedelic cook-out.

Taking place on the back lawn, the party was fed on soul vibrations by the "Sounds Unlimited," a local group of Caucasian soul musicians. The guests were fed in the ears with music and to the gills with hamburgers, and in the opinion of the invited, the best of both.

Splashes of colors and multi-hued lights transformed the Katkaveck lawn into the ideal exterior night club for the Edenton younger set. Flowers provided the central theme, as tablecloths, candle globes and basketball goals were bedecked in psychedelic floral decorations. Mod fashions, including bell-bottoms and many mini-lengths made the evening an exciting visual exhibition for hosts, onlookers and the neighbors.

Miss Conger will make her bow to society at North Carolina's annual Terpsicorean Ball, escorted by her father, Joseph H. Conger, Jr. Mr. Katkaveck, Jr., will escort Miss Conger for the weekend of parties in Raleigh, September 4 through 7.

Bonnie will attend Southern Seminary in Buena Vista, Va., this fall and Frankie attends N. C. State University in Raleigh and will be a sophomore.
