the community college system will have testing centers.

An example of the success that surrounds these centers is what happened at Pitt Technical Institute. When the center opened there, 40 applicants immediately were knocking at the door.

How often the tests are given is up to the individual centers, who offer them according to the demand in their communities.

To apply to take the GED tests, a person must be 19 years old; however, an applicant 18 years old may apply provided he has been out of a regular high school program for at least six months.

Gains Are Made

North Carolinians who have completed high school study in their adult years are finding out that the results are far reaching. Gains are seen in job promotions, home improvements, family budgets as well as in attendance at plays, concerts and cultural events.

Many continue their studies at the community college or technical institute that made it possible for them to get a high school education. And some enter four-year institutions.

Lives Saved By Checkups

Have you had a complete physical examination lately? Many people put off checkups and even ignore warning signs until when they finally get to a doctor it is too late for a simple cure.

It's smart to go for a checkup when you think you're healthy. Once a year. Annual visits help your doctor keep tabs on you. It also helps you enjoy the peace of mind that comes from knowing you're doing the best thing for your health.

Over 200,000 people were saved last year. One and a half million men, women and children are living happy, healthy lives today, cured of cancer.

Annual checkups can help us save thousands more. What are you waiting for?

4-H Tour

A group of 4-H'ers from Cross Roads and Center Hill 4-H Clubs went on a tour of historical places in Dare County during August. The group spent the night at the 4-H Camp and went to see the "Lost Colony." This was the first time for several in the group to visit this part of the state.

The group visited several places of interest such as the Wright Memorial, sand dunes, the recreation center at Nags Head, the visitors' center at the Lost Colony. The group went swimming in the ocean which was a first for some of the group.

We hope to go on a longer tour next year—perhaps to Washington, D. C.

Another Leader

The name Isaac Gregory stood foremost in the thoughts of the citizens of northeastern Carolina in 1775. He was a capable statesman from Camden County who served as a member of the Provincial Congress at that time.

Later, when small fires of discontent flared into the flame of open revolt, Gregory served with distinction as a Brigadier General of militia in the Revolution.

Returning to his home county, he represented it as a member of the N. C. conventions of 1788-1789.

Through the years, the Gregory name has remained prominent in the county.

the world. The race to be first in so many areas, and best, in others. All these combine to turn our thoughts from God.

In the earlier days of Christianity the life of the people was largely based on agriculture, and the people worked with what had been primarily given of God. Today, we have moved into the atomic age and the space age. We have become industrialized. But the atom and space are also primarily given of God. Man has conquered and explored areas that in Biblical times were not positively known to exist. This is a credit to man's mind—his God-given mind. But, although man has achieved very much good through his breaking of hitherto unsurmountable barriers, he has also achieved a potential for evil that staggers the mind of true humanitarian people. Will good win out over evil? If a counterpart of Mount Carmel is presented to us, today, will we affirm and re-affirm our faith in God, and humbly acknowledge His ways?
