Honest Darrell Gets His Reward

(Editor's Note: The following article appeared in a trade publication put out for employees of Hardee's Food Systems, Inc.)

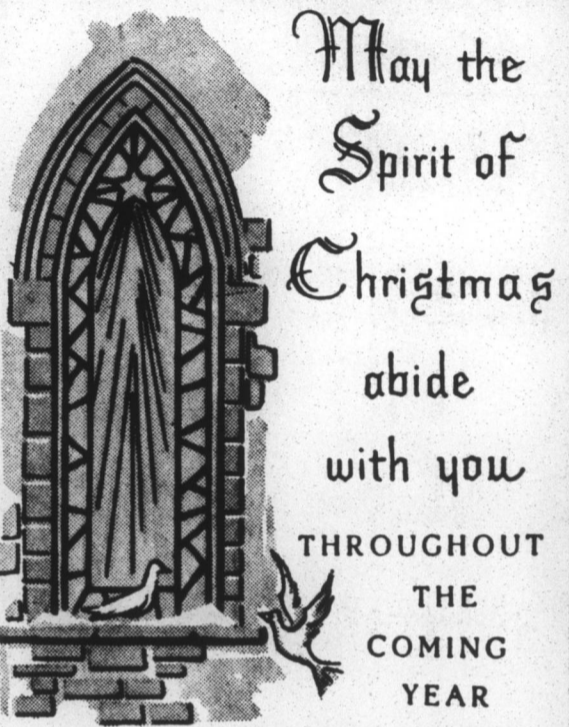

HONESTY SPEAKING
It was Sunday, a busy day for Hardee's restaurant and its employees. The mid day rush was over.

Looking through the big glass window facing the street, Darrell Parker, assistant manager of Hardee's of Edenton, North Carolina, saw a lady's handbag sitting on one of the outside tables. Thinking of the lady who left it and her probable anxiety, he immediately stepped outside and looked around. Seeing no one, he picked up the handbag and carried it into the restaurant. His first thoughts were of identification—so he opened the bag and began looking. In his search to identify the owner, he discovered $610.00 in cash and a check in the amount of $104.00. With that amount of money lost, Darrell knew the owner would be back—so he immediately put all contents back into the handbag and locked it in a cabinet for safekeeping.

A short time later the telephone rang. It was a long distance call from a lady asking about a lost handbag. Darrell told her one had been left there at Hardee's and requested a description for identification purposes. She easily described the handbag and her ownership was established. Then stating she would return as soon as possible, the conversation ended.

Returning sometime later for her handbag, the lady rewarded Darrell $10 for his honesty.
