Arians frequently forge their way uphill through life with courage, daring, energy and enterprise. Leaders, pioneers and "aristocrats," like the rams who direct the flock, they pack more ramifications into a lifetime than many people think possible. They are very much fire-brands.

The Aries is aroused in any sphere where his natural urges can be reasonably expressed. He is therefore better as boss, even if only in a small way; better where noise and dash are not objected to, and better where initiative is needed.

Vigor and vivaciousness are the prevailing traits of Arians, according to FTD florists, who add that red is their color, amongst their birthstone and tulips their flowers. At the first sign of the arrival of spring, they often send flowers to friends—helping to create a climate for renewed energy, enthusiasm and affection.

S. S. Records Are Very Important

A farmer friend of mine says his neighbor down the road recently remarked that keeping records is too much trouble and is "something for the birds."

Well, he's wrong. Birds don't need to keep records. Farmers do.

As agricultural agents and farm management specialists have long stressed, record-keeping is a good business practice for farmers as it is for other self-employed people.

Good and complete records are needed for tax purposes. All self-employed people, including farmers, who have net earnings of $400 or more in a year must report their income to Internal Revenue and pay the social security tax—even though because of low income, some of them may not have to pay the regular income tax.

It's extremely important to file complete and correct tax returns (in compliance with the law), reporting all self-employment earnings, since future social security benefits will be based on the amounts of income reported. For this purpose it is essential to keep good current records of all farm income and expenses—and to save all sales receipts, paid bills or invoices, cancelled checks, etc.

Simple records are satisfactory if all items of income and expenses are clearly, correctly and completely shown. The itemized records of income should show what and how much was sold; when it was sold, to whom, and for how much money.

Good records make possible complete and correct tax returns that will ensure full social security credits, which in turn will result in higher benefit payments later on.

The University of North Carolina at Greensboro was established as a college for women in 1891, and opened its doors in October, 1892, with an enrollment of 198 students. Now it has 6,423 students.

The University of North Carolina at Greensboro is expected to have an enrollment of over 9,000 students by 1975. The student body numbers 6,423 for the 1969-70 academic year.
