

Rare Breed Of Cattle To Be Shown At Aurora

RALEIGH—A breed of cattle new to the state and rare in the nation, that eventually may upgrade cattle-raising here, will be introduced to Tar Heels at the first Eastern N. C. Cattlemen's Field Day and Family Outing Friday near Aurora.

Sponsored by the N. C. Extension Service, N. C. State University, the N. C. Department of Agriculture and the N. C. Cattlemen's Association, the event is dedicated to the expansion of the beef cattle industry in the state.

Texas Gulf Sulphur Company will be host to the day-long instructional event at its Pamlico Farms South, a 2,000-acre beef cattle land management farm adjoining its phosphate mining and processing plant. C. O. Stephens, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Texas Gulf, will welcome participants. The farm is on land that eventually will be mined, and shows how it will be used after mining and reclamation.

The Swiss cattle, known as Simmental, will be shown for the first time in this region by Hayes Gregory, manager of Pamlico Farms South. He is cross-breeding the new cattle with Black Angus to obtain a faster rate of growth, improved milk production, and yet retain the choice beef grade of the Angus. Gregory will discuss his advanced program of cross-breeding. The Black Angus herd numbers

1,300 head. Subjects to be covered by NCSU experts will include: herd health, use of pesticides on beef cattle; forages in Eastern N. C.; herd management, and advantages and disadvantages of cross breeding. Programs for women will include practical discussions of beef use. Preparation of cattle for showing will be directed toward youth. The program begins at 9

A. M. and will be held in park-like open air shelters. A tour of the TGS phosphate mine and manufacturing plant is included in the day's activities.

Letters To The Editor:

Franklin, Va., June 30, 1970.

We enclose a check for $4.50 to continue our subscription to The Chowan Herald. Stumbling along the "Public Parade" the other day I came across an interesting fact. The storm signals at Edenton are not posted on weekends. Last summer and again this summer on weekend sailing expeditions on the Sound and in Edenton Bay, I have been watching that mast with all confidence. I watched again on Sunday, June 21, when there was enough wind to sail the Courthouse (and enough rain to sink it) but nary a rag on the trusted mast.

Pleasure boating is on the increase in the Edenton area. The folks at the Marina, as well as the other boaters we've met, couldn't be any nicer, but I sure would like to see those warnings operated on the weekends when most boaters are out. How about the police?

nature, inclined to always seek the easy path. But, to one who is strong of spirit, and sharply aware of the debt of mankind to his Creator, hardships are no deterrent. Rather they are the crucible in which endurance is hardened and tempered, as fine steel is tempered.

God wields ownership—we are privileged with stewardship.

Fire House Visit Seen Educational

A trip to the local fire department may be one of the best and least painful ways to teach your children the importance of good fire safety habits, says the Insurance Information Institute.

For children, a trip to a fire station offers not only education, but also fun. Most local fire departments welcome the opportunity to show the kids around, give them a chance to climb onto the fire apparatus, and back up your instructions to the youngsters about what to do in case of fire.

It's a good idea to arrange such a visit in advance to make sure there's a fireman on hand to talk to the children.

White Collar Workers Unionization Declines for Second Straight Year

Unionization of white collar employees in private industry experienced its second straight year of decline in 1969. The analysis of National Labor Relations Board election figures by the White Collar Report published by The Bureau of National Affairs, Inc. shows that organizing continued to decline from its nine-year peak in 1967.

Heavy election losses among technical employees' and salesmen's units account for the drop. In these categories, unions suffered 87 more election losses and gained 1,855 fewer employees than in 1968.

A total of 98,183,000 persons read one or more newspapers every day, according to a 1970 study by the W. R. Simmons Co.

Last year 647 newspapers in the U.S. and Canada spent more than $169 million on plant expansion and modernization.
