this week in our favorite afternoon daily of general circulation in Northeastern North Carolina, quotes the jurist as saying he is "just getting tired of all that mess" caused by surfers. He will impose maximum fines of $50 and seizure of surfboards for illegal surfing at Nags Head.

He carried through on his threat last week when three Norfolk Va., teenagers were brought before him. They were fined $50, plus $15 costs of court and $3 jail fees. This they probably were able to obtain from their parents, therefore not have to go to jail for 30 days.

The thing, however, that will apparently hurt the most is being relieved of their surfboards for 30 days. This their parents can't help them with.

Judge Horner not only hit them squarely in the pocketbook he gave them a healthy judicial blow in the surfboard. And in so doing, the judge struck a lick for safety and decency; relieved the trio not only of a considerable amount of cash but their status symbol as well.

CHUGS RIGHT ALONG

verted her puffing steam engine to a rumbling 680-horsepower diesel to swing her six-foot propeller. The same conversion allowed the tall stack required for her boiler to be replaced with a stubby, modern stack carrying off the diesel exhaust.

She is 75 feet long including a five-foot bustle added to her stern to provide more work space aft and to protect her rudder. She draws eight feet and has a 16-foot, nine-inch beam on her wrought iron hull. From her waterline to the top of her mast she is 33 feet tall. With a black hull and red deckhouse she looks like what she is, a busy and hard working tugboat.

Captain Harry Ward of Winton was her skipper from 1937 until his death in 1955 when she was pulling up to three wooden barges holding 90 cords each of logs for Union Camp's lumber and paper operation at Franklin. More modern steel barges can be made up into a tow of six and are hauling two hundred cords each. Union Camp now has a fleet of 24 barges.

Captain Ward's son, Harry B. Ward, Jr., who lives in Winton, is carrying on the family tradition and is Supervisor of River Operations for Union Camp as well as captain of the Corinthia. When Captain Ward is not on board, Walter Evans, also of Winton, is skipper.

Union Camp maintains barge yards, landings where wood is collected and loaded on barges, at Columbia on the south side of the Albemarle Sound, near the Edenton Municipal Airport on the north side of the Sound, and at Winton far up the Chowan. A fourth yard is now under construction at South Mills.

A typical itinerary for the Corinthia includes leaving Franklin on Monday morning, and passing down the Blackwater by Weyanoke where the Blackwater and the Nottoway flow together to form the Chowan. By Wednesday evening she has visited the yards and distributed her empty barges. Thursday she is ready to leave Edenton for her return up the river, stopping at Winton to pick up barges there. She's back in Franklin on Friday. Lately she has been making as many as two trips a week to show she's still got plenty of get-up-and-go.

Corinthia's future? There are forecasts of an increase in barge hauling on the Chowan and its tributary streams. The Corinthia has more years ahead of her and will enjoy being the senior craft on the waterways.

Heard & Seen
"By Buff"

My old Richmond, Ind., friend DeWitt Cooper, sent me a copy of the Palladium-Item which devoted a great deal of space to the funeral of Dan A. Mitrone. Mr. Mitrone, a native of Richmond and U. S. Adviser in Montevideo, Uruguay, was murdered and his body buried in Richmond. And, incidentally, Friend Coop sent a note to the Missus, saying: "It's a dickens of a way to spend your birthday—in a hospital."

And talking about the hospital, the Missus returned to Chowan Hospital Wednesday morning of this week. Due to being so very weak, it is hoped several doses of glucose and hospital attention will enable her to regain some of her strength. Anyway, here's hoping!

At the hospital the Missus is a near neighbor of Shorty Parkerson—just across the hall. Shorty has been "boarding" at the hospital for a few weeks now, but he says he's expecting to go home some time today (Thursday). He will have orders to stay cooped up at home, but he wants his friends to know how much he would enjoy them calling to see him at home.

The folks who are obliged to park their cars some distance from work these days are somewhat puzzled. If the windows are closed and it does not rain, a fellow about roasts when getting in the car to go to lunch. Then on the other hand, if the windows are left open and it rains—well some of us get a good bottom wetting. Don't know which is worse!

A person hears some funny remarks sometimes in a grocery store. The other day I passed a fellow looking in the frozen food department. "If my wife fed me on that stuff," he said, "I'd darn soon get a divorce."

Here's one who had to miss the 60th reunion of my high school class in York, Pa., which was held Saturday night. But if I could have been there, no matter how much the gals used make-up, I could have guessed all their ages within one or two years. Anyway of the 85 in the class of 1910, only 35 are still alive and I doubt if I could recognize many of them had I been there.

Bud Amburn needs space for his news, so dat's all this week.

BATEMAN APPOINTED

Ithaca, N. Y.—Dr. Durward F. Bateman, professor of plant pathology at Cornell University, has been appointed chairman of the Department of Plant Pathology in the N. Y. State College of Agriculture.

His appointment was announced by Dean Charles E. Palm of the college, and was effective August 1. He is the fourth professor to head the department in 63 years.

The Department of Plant Pathology, founded in 1907, conducts teaching, research and extension programs on the nature of plant diseases and their control.

In addition to the main facilities in the Plant Science Building, the Virology-Nematology Laboratory, and the Controlled Environment Laboratory at Ithaca, programs are carried out in seven laboratories and research farms at Lake Placid, Orange County, Steuben County, Sodus and on Long Island.

Bateman is a native of North Carolina, the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Bateman of Tyrner and received his B.S. degree in botany from North Carolina State University in 1956 and his Ph.D. degree in plant pathology from Cornell in 1960. He has been a member of the Cornell faculty for the past 10 years.

His research and teaching programs have been in the area of plant disease and pathogen physiology. He and his students have made major research discoveries on the way fungi attack plants and the way in which plants respond at the metabolic level to limit fungal invasion.

Bateman was a member of the Constituent Assembly at Cornell last year, and is now a member of the University Senate. He has just completed a three-year term as field representative for the field of plant pathology in the graduate school.

He has published 68 scientific publications relating to plant pathology, plant physiology and biochemistry.

In May, 1966, Bateman was one of 11 Americans to participate in a U. S.-Japan Scientific Seminar in Japan sponsored by the U. S. Department of State, the National Science Foundation and the Japan Society for the Promotion of Science.

Bateman, his wife Shirley and their daughter, Cynthia, Brenda and Diane, live at 7 Bean Hill Lane, Ithaca.

Swain School Picked For Program

One hundred and seventy-three schools in North Carolina have been approved by the State Board of Education for participation in the Comprehensive School Improvement Project for the 1970-71 school year.

Commonly known as CSIP, the Project is designed to improve the total educational program in the elementary schools by the use of innovative approaches such as team teaching flexible grouping non-graded organization, utilization of teacher aides, and the like. The Ernest A. Swain Elementary School of the Edenton-Chowan School Administrative Unit is demonstrate their skills and could sell their products.

In 1967, Miss Bishop received the Florence Hall Award, a high national honor from the National Association of Extension Home Economists for her leadership in the crafts program.

A native of Georgia, Miss Bishop began her North Carolina Extension career in Cherokee County. She transferred to Pasquotank in 1956 and was named area agent in 1965.

"Mrs. Edwards worked closely with Miss Bishop in promoting crafts interests in the Albemarle area," Dr. Cofer pointed out. "She will bring many competencies and skills into her new work."

Mrs. Edwards received her bachelor of arts degree from East Carolina University. She taught home economics in the Ayden schools until she joined the Extension Service in 1955 as agent in Tyrrell County. She transferred to Pasquotank County in 1961.

Wildlife Meeting

The first meeting of the new hunting season for Albemarle Wildlife Club will be held Tuesday at 7 P. M., in Surfside Recreation Center at Cape Colony.

A free dinner will be served and valuable door prizes will be awarded. Plans will also be made for the club's annual dove hunt September 5.

Wildlife club members and guests are encouraged to attend.

Bloodmobile Visit

The American Red Cross Bloodmobile will be in Chowan County on Monday.

Jack Parker, Jaycee volunteer chairman, said the quota for this visit is 105 units. The bloodmobile will be at National Guard Armory from 11 A. M., to 5 P. M.

This is a community sponsored project in which everyone benefits, Parker said. Everyone is asked to participate and help reach this quota.

The Boy Scouts, under the direction of Lyle Hunnicutt, will contact residents of the town of Edenton to ask them to sign pledge cards donating one unit of blood.

SCS Report Set

The Albemarle Soil and Water Conservation District held its Annual Field Day meeting August 11 at Chowan Community Building.

Lloyd Bunch, chairman, presided at the business session which was held from 10 A. M., until noon.

Charles L. Lehning, Jr., assistant state conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service spoke on how the SCS was started and the service's work in watersheds and RC&D projects for this fiscal year.

W. O. Lambeth, area conservationist, reviewed the Memorandum of Understanding between the Soil Conservation Service and the district.

Two boys who attended the Resource Conservation Workshop at N. C. State University this summer were present to tell of their experiences at the workshop and how much they enjoyed the event.

Bunch reported on the Southeastern Area NACD meeting he attended in Norfolk, Va., on July 26-28. This meeting consisted of district supervisors from 11 Southeastern States.

The district voted to have their Annual Report printed for distribution to various cooperating agencies, newsletter sponsors, cooperators and other persons interested in the conservation program.

After lunch the supervisors and guests received a tour of two of Chowan County's industrial sites, Seabrook Bleaching Corp., and The Carter's Ink Company.

GOP Vice Chairman Visits Chowan

"It is for our own protection to have a two-party system. It is a good check and balance."

Speaking was Mrs. Grace Rohrer of Winston-Salem. A public school teacher, Mrs. Rohrer is vice chairman of the Republican Party in North Carolina.

On her first visit to Northeastern North Carolina, Mrs. Rohrer was impressed with the scenery as well as the attitudes of the people she had met. "With people like Ed Bass (Chowan GOP chairman) working so hard, we know considerable progress will be made in the future," she noted.

She predicted, also, that her party would gain seats in the General Assembly as well as in the U. S. Congress.

The vice chairman said she is moving around the state as much as time will permit to take some of the leg-work off Chairman Jim Holhouser of Boone.

And in the First District, she sees R. Frank Everett as having a "good chance" in his bid to unseat Rep. Walter B. Jones. And, she adds: "We hope to keep our incumbents—Reps. Jonas, Broyhill, Ruth and Mizelle."

She pointed out that the GOP continues to gain strength in the Piedmont. In Forsyth County, for example, the Republicans hold every office except one, she said.

The vice chairman is not talking about candidates for governor. While Holhouser and Jim Gardner are the most frequently mentioned, she feels other names will move up following the November election.

Returning to the value of the two-party system in North Carolina, she pointed to her own county. This is the first time the Republicans have faced re-election and "now they have to answer" for their administration. "This type situation on the state level will make North Carolina stronger," she added.

WIRTANEN NAMED

the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife's Incentive Award.

In 1968 he was detailed to Spearfish, S. D., to the bureau's in-service training school. After he completed a 10½-month training program, he was promoted to the position of biologist in charge of developing striped bass feeding techniques at the Edenton National Fish Hatchery, the position from which he is now transferring.

A native of Crystal Falls, Mich., Wirtanen received a B.S. degree in Fisheries and Wildlife Biology from Michigan State University, East Lansing, Mich. He served two years in the Marine Corps.

As administrator of the Edenton National Fish Hatchery, Wirtanen will be responsible for the complete operation of the hatchery. Edenton National Fish Hatchery raised 21,054 pounds or 1,976,000 redear, bluegill, largemouth bass, and striped bass last year. The total production included 18,400 pounds or 637,000 striped bass, which is a substantial record for this very important game fish.

The redear, bluegill, and largemouth bass are stocked in waters of 32 counties in North Carolina and four counties in Virginia. The striped bass were shipped to many Southeastern States plus two foreign countries.
