Compact TV Sets Serve Outdoors

You don't have to miss your favorite program, history making news or television specials if you take your TV set on vacation this year.

Television sets today are compact enough to fit into luggage compartments, and keep you in touch, whether you are at a lodge, lake cottage or in a trailer-camper.

Today, TV sets are also lightweight and rugged. Zenith's handcrafted 12-inch diagonal screen set, for example, weighs only 17 pounds.

Most campers are fitted with an outdoor cable that hooks up to outlets in our trailer parks. Marinas also have AC current outlets within reach of a boat's berth.

Save your radio or TV packing box as protection from salt mist and road bumps.

Addressing an industrial relations group in Honolulu, Hawaii, Mr. Keeler explained, "We in industry are not 'an island unto ourselves,' but are a part of the community. From a very practical view, social problems have a very definite effect on our business operation."

"You can be sure that if industry does not do its job in solving social problems, the government will attempt solutions through ineffective, socialist type legislation. Based on many such past governmental efforts, the results would be chaos and confusion with little, if any, tangible results."

He predicted that unless industry manifests social concern, it will not attract the many new, young employees who want to go where "the action is."

Pointing out that industry is uniquely qualified to do the job of solving social problems, through talent, organization ability and leadership, Mr. Keeler added that getting involved in helping solve social problems is the moral thing for industry to do. "Christian ethics should not be excluded from the Board rooms of business," he said.

Old Discarded Tires Make New Fish Haven

Building reefs with old auto and truck tires may become valuable conservation tools, according to Richard B. Stone of the U.S. Department of Interior. The tire casings provide ready-made havens for a variety of game fish.

Under study by The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, it could provide an economical and beneficial means of disposing of millions of automobile tires.

Remote Listening

A wireless speaker adapter has been recently introduced which will pick up the sound of stereo, TV, tape recorder, or record player by any regular or portable radio within 100 feet.

This permits one to listen to a favorite TV program in another room from a nearby radio. The hard of hearing can again enjoy TV and music with the new product without disturbing others.

The adapter is distributed by Herbert Salch & Co.

Moisture-laden Food? Plastic Containers Keep Dampness Out

Summer weather means plenty of sunshine . . . and plenty of humidity. Dampness can mean sticky problems in out-of-doors kitchens. Plastic containers, however, can keep the humidity out and the freshness in.

Salt and pepper have an annoying tendency to stick to the shaker in damp weather. Instead of tapping away at a sulking salt lump in the shaker, keep it flowing free in a sealed plastic container. Moisture resistant Tupperware shakers are especially designed to keep humidity from getting inside. The unique Seal means that all spices are only exposed to dampness for an instant.

Hot weather means plenty of activity during recreation trips . . . and an increased need for salt to make up for energy loss. Keep salt pills handy for all the family. To keep them from forming a lump, store in a sealed plastic storage cup to keep the tablets loose and apart.

Soggy potato chips? Crackers that sag instead of snap? Dry foods are especially prone to becoming moisture-laden out of doors. Bread, cereals, and other dry foods can be kept fresh and protected from dampness when kept sealed tight in plastic containers available in all sizes and shapes to meet individual storage needs.
