

Immanuel Baptist School Day Care Center Opens

Immanuel Christian School and Immanuel Baptist Day Care Center are now open at Immanuel Baptist Church. Mrs. Linda Hawkins, supervisor-teacher, reported that tuition is low with the purpose being to provide quality education and Christian guidance.

year. Mrs. Hawkins said that reading is an important part of their educational program.

A library is now being outfitted and the children visit the public library each week. In addition the Bible is taught, but these studies do not include any church doctrine. Bible stories and truths are taught in a dramatic manner with the children taking part and acting out various stories, it was stated.

She said extensive planning was involved in initiating the school and research was done in selecting materials and texts.

The Immanuel Christian School is approved by the N. C. Department of Public Instruction. Financing was accomplished completely with local money, without federal or state assistance. Students are insured during and to and from school.

Facilities are now available for pre-schoolers through the first grade. Currently, there are 70 children enrolled in the school.

Mrs. Hawkins stated that pre-schoolers are given a hot lunch each day as well as a nap. She emphasized that the day care center is designed to give working mothers a wholesome place to leave their child during the day.

The day care center is open from 6:45 A. M. to 6:45 P. M. The school facility is staffed with five teachers, and plans are to add a grade each

NEW SCHOOL OPENS — The Immanuel Christian School and Immanuel Baptist Day Care Center are now open with an enrollment of 70 children. Tuesday was registration day with the first full day being Wednesday. From left to right: Interested parents visited the school to tour the facilities and discuss the program. Two youngsters seemed more interested by the camera than they were with the colorful posters on the walls about them. Mrs. Sandra Phillips is teaching first grade. She was busy introducing her students to the new world of school.
