Mrs. Ross Inglis Speaker At Club

The Garden of Eden Club met on January 16 at the home of Mrs. J. Gilliam Wood. Mrs. Ross Inglis, garden club member and wildflower enthusiast, presented by slide and narration a splendid program of her trips from Britain to Morocco.

Beginning in Northeastern Scotland, she showed slides of wildflowers native to that area such as heathers, foxgloves, bluebells, and pansies. From there to London she saw wildflowers native to Regents Park and St. James Park. An interesting fact, she stated, was that crocus, plentiful in England, bears one of the oldest names in the plant world dating there from the third century B. C. Some of the more prevalent wildflowers in England are jonquils, foxgloves, primrose and English daisies.

Her travels then took her to Gibraltar. Surprisingly there were many wildflowers growing on these barren rocks; however, on the other side of Gibraltar there was tropical growth including oleander and myrtle.

Her next stop was Morocco and the Rif Mountains. The barren terrain showed little vegetation other than cedars, olive trees and a pine similar to the Norfolk pine. Traveling south the vegetation became more plentiful with calla lilies, iris, glads and poppies growing in profusion.

Returning to the coast of Morocco they traveled through thick planted forests of Eucalyptus. Arriving on the coast near Casablanca she discovered sea holly which is native to that area as well as the Nags Head area.

The program was enthusiastically received by all the club members.
