Conservationists Workshop Held

A workshop for Area Five Soil and Water Conservation District Clerks and District Conservationists and Technicians with the Soil Conservation Service was held September 19 at the Town and Country Restaurant in Williamston. Approximately 50 employees of these two organizations, serving the 20 county Northeastern Area Five, attended.

The purpose of the workshop was to establish a better understanding of the working relationship between district clerks and district conservationists or technicians assigned together in individual county field offices and working to carry out the objectives of their district's program of soil and water conservation.

Jim Canterbury, area

conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service, was moderator for the meeting which was more or less an open discussion to formulate ways and means of working together to bring about a more effective program of soil and water conservation.

The meeting was open to anyone having suggestions to this intent, but there were short talks by several members of both organizations. District clerks, Charlotte Wheeler from Northampton County, Shelby White from Chowan, and Ruth Woodley of Tyrrell County along with District Conservationist John Litchfield of Northampton County and Wilson Spencer, district conservationist for Tyrrell, Dare, Washington and Hyde Counties participated in the program. Grady Lane and Mike White, members of the State Soil and Water Conservation Committee, coordinator for Soil and Water Conservation Districts in North Carolina, were on hand to discuss responsibilities of district clerks in assisting the District and SCS.

Garland Strickland, district supervisor from Nash County and treasurer of the N. C. Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts, spoke briefly and presented his views as to the role both district clerks and SCS personnel should have in assisting districts.

Canterberry relates that the meeting was a success as many ideas were discussed and plans formulated for district clerks and SCS personnel to work together to provide more technical assistance to landusers and strengthen the conservation movement.

4-H has truly moved to the city. It is reported that several 4-H groups have been organized in Chicago's 100 story John Hancock Center luxury apartment complex and the third tallest building in the world.
