Jones Named To Foundation Board

W. P. (Spec) Jones, of Edenton, has been named to the Board of Directors of the N. C. Humanities Foundation, Inc., a new non-profit organization to develop support for the School of Liberal Arts at N. C. State University.

Jones was one of 40 prominent citizens of North Carolina named as directors at the foundation's organization meeting this week at N. C. State.

The foundation is one of 11 private fund-raising organizations which aid academic, research and extension programs at State in such areas as engineering, design, pulp and paper, agriculture, forestry, textiles, education and 4-H work.

State Treasurer Edwin Gill presided at the organization's first meeting. John Council of Lake Waccamaw was elected president and Mrs. Maceo Sloan of Durham was elected vice president. Rudolph Pate, NCSU director of foundations, and John D. Wright, NCSU vice chancellor for business, were elected secretary and treasurer respectively.

State Chancellor John T. Caldwell called the foundation's organization a most significant development for liberal arts and said its work would help achieve the same level of excellence for the humanities and social sciences as has been accomplished in the sciences and technologies at the university.

Dean Robert O. Tilman reported to the new foundation directors that liberal arts is the largest school at N. C. State University—with 3,200 majors. He said there are 240 faculty.
