Edmisten Winner

It took six ballots, three more than he had predicted, but Rufus Edmisten of Boone won the Democratic nomination for Attorney General of North Carolina. The eight-hour secret balloting took place Saturday in Hotel Sir Walter in Raleigh.

There were eight candidates seeking the post decided by a 260-member State Democratic Executive Committee. There were 258 votes cast with Currituck and Dare counties failing to have a representative or designate a proxy.

Most committeemen from Northeastern North Carolina, include George Alma Byrum of Chowan, supported State Rep. Kitchin Josey of Scotland Neck when their candidate withdrew prior to the final ballot, they went with Edmisten over State Rep. Herbert Hyde of Asheville.

Edmisten, who resigned as assistant counsel to the Senate Watergate Committee to seek the nomination, received 74 votes on

R. Frank Everett

R. Frank Everett of Hamilton has sold his last bag of cucumbers, his last pile of tobacco, and his last farm implements. He has played his last game of politics. He died Wednesday in the prime of life, at age 53.

Frank Everett was a fierce competitor in everything he ever undertook; be it farming, business or politics. He became a friend of ours before we came to meander along the Public Parade. Through mutual political cronies we sat in awe sometimes in smoke filled rooms while he spelled out strategy.

On the way back home from one of our trips to Edenton, we stopped in at his business in Robersonville to say hello. We wondered aloud about all the bags in the fields up and down the highway and ended up with one of them in the back of our car.

You can imagine what kind of reception we got at home with a bushel of cucumbers.

We knew Frank as a Democrat, and a darned good one, at that. In 1968 he became disenchanted with the national party and switched to the Republicans. We never knew him as well anymore.

He served three terms in the General Assembly as a Democrat and represented Martin County well. He was fearless, often times being among the last to compromise even though it was apparent he was outnumbered.

As a Republican he was the same way. He gave it every ounce of his energy for politics was a way of life. It was a game he enjoyed and he was a pro at it.

A breach developed between us when he felt we were too critical of him and too strong in our support of his opponent when he ran unsuccessfully for Congress in 1970. But last year he good-naturedly chided us at a legislative hearing on health manpower which was held over in Williamston.

He was recovering from open-heart surgery and barely able to get about. But he felt so strongly about the ECU Medical School question that he attended the hearing.

During his brief remarks he pointed out that he had once thought he wouldn't attend. "But I am especially glad that I came because I have found something that Bud Amburn and I can once again agree on," he said.

We offer our deepest sympathy to the Everett family. They have lost a husband, father, brother, and grandfather. We share in this loss. We have lost a friend.

More Respect Deserved

Public attitudes about the power of arrest are growing by alarming measures. But if more judges took the crime of resisting arrest more seriously they could get the

EMS Program In High Gear

Region "R" is the only region in North Carolina to get federal funds for formation of an Emergency Medical Service Council and is well ahead of other areas in the state in establishing governing boards for EMS.

This was noted Thursday night by Jim Page, state EMS director, who delivered a check for $12,500 from the state to assist the council. He said an additional $16,666 could be expected during the current fiscal year.

Through the efforts of Albemarle Human Resources Development System, executive agent for EMS in the region, an HEW grant of $37,000 has been received to establish the council.

Murray Ashley, director of the Chowan County Civil Preparedness Agency in Chowan County and a representative of Edenton-Chowan Rescue Squad, was named chairman of the regional council. Bill Hartman, Pasquotank County coordinator, was elected vice chairman and Mrs. Barbara Cale, vice president for professional services at Chowan Hospital, secretary.

During a brief talk to some 36 people attending the meeting, Page warned that "HEW is not going to be a savior" for EMS. He said money received from all sources must be wisely spent to on the N. C. State University Campus last week.

Chowan had two state winners, Pat Perry and Marion Dail. Pat won in the Pork Cookery division and received a $50 savings bond.

Pat's pork cookery demonstration was grilling barbecue neck bone steaks. Marion was a winner in the Cotton Utilization category and received $75 savings bond. Marion's demonstration gave a general survey of cotton from field to fabric.

There were also three second place winners. Glenn Ward and Marta Rogerson placed second in the American Business System. They and their coach, Murray Goodwin, 4-H coordinator, are thus presented an expense-paid nine-day trip to Manhattan, Kan. Al Ward placed second in the Small Engines category.

Unofficial third place winner Bill Jordan in Forestry and Bob Jordan came in fourth in the Wildlife demonstration contest.

Chowan County was also represented by two groups selected to perform at the 4-H Congress due to the outstanding talents they possess. One group, a vocal trio was composed of Calvin Vaughan, Alvin Downing and Thomas Slade. They performed at the Tuesday morning assembly and sang "It Never Rains In Southern California" and the "Ploughing Song". These songs were recorded for use on a national basis (National 4-H

Crop Damages Caused By Rains

Heavy thundershowers mixed with some hail pelted Edenton and portions of Chowan County yesterday, dropping up to 4½ inches of rain in certain areas.

There was flooding of streets and roads, and telephone service was interrupted for many area residents. Most damage seemed to occur in the Macedonia area where the storm cut a swath, defoliating trees and backing up water from creeks and streams into low-lying land.

Pete Thompson, county extension agent, reported some damage to tobacco: It may also spell danger to cotton, vegetables, and other crops due to insects and disease if a spell of hot and sultry weather follows.

"We're going to have to do a good job of controlling disease and we're going to have to do a good job of spraying," he said. Ground operations will be hampered until the water settles, and he urged growers to stay with their crop dusting program.

Cool weather is needed. A return to high temperatures will scald the roots of certain plants as well as be conducive to hatching more insects, and spawning certain viruses. Two to three days of fair weather would be about the best thing for the situation, Thompson reported.

An extended weather forecast predicts fair skies today (Thursday), a chance of rain on Friday, and fair weather on Saturday and Sunday. A stalled cold front was cited as the primary cause of the downpour.

NEW AD MANAGER—Allan Asbell, right, has been named advertising manager for The Chowan Herald, succeeding Hector Lupton who announced his retirement this week. They are shown discussing a special downtown Sidewalk Sale promotion which is being held in Edenton this week.

New Ad Manager For Herald

R. Hector Lupton retired today as advertising manager of The Chowan Herald, a position he has held since he co-founded the weekly newspaper in 1934.

Allan Asbell of Arrowhead will fill the position being vacated by Lupton, according to L. F. Amburn, Jr., president and general manager of The Chowan Herald, Inc. Asbell, a native of Chowan County, most recently was director of public relations for "The New East" magazine.

Lupton will assist Asbell on a part-time basis, according to Amburn.

"Hec Lupton has provided fine leadership in the development and expansion of this newspaper and certainly has earned the right to accept lesser responsibilities," Amburn said. "I am pleased that he has agreed to remain identified with us, as he still has many productive years ahead."

Lupton and J. Edwin Bufflap founded The Chowan Herald in August, 1934. They sold their interests to a corporation headed by Amburn in January, 1965, but both have remained with the newspaper on a full-time basis.

In addition to being advertising manager, Amburn said Asbell will do some special assignment reporting and photography for The Herald. He said the new manager has proven himself as a creative salesman during the past year with the regional magazine published by Eden Press, Inc., of Edenton.

"The Herald is fortunate to have someone of his ability to take over a department which Lupton has directed successfully for 40 years," the publisher said. "Allan is young and aggressive and we anticipate steady growth in the future."
