Mrs. Turner Co-Authors Grammar Book

Charles W. Lowry, Nancy S. Turner, and Suzanne B. Jordan have written a textbook, "The Complete Guide To Basic Grammar", published by Kendall-Hunt Publishing Company of Dubuque, Io. This text will be used in English courses at Central Carolina Technical Institute for technical students and in one Campbell College course. The authors wrote the text in response to a growing need for a return to the traditional approach in the teaching of basic grammar skills.

The text contains numerous exercises and thorough explanations of every grammatical structure. Kendall-Hunt Publishing Company, a division of William C. Browne Company, will market the book in other schools, including technical institutes, community colleges, universities and in public high schools.

Lowry and Mrs. Turner are presently teaching at CCTI. Mrs. Jordan, a former instructor at CCTI, is now teaching at N. C. State University.

Mrs. Turner, a graduate of East Carolina University is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alphonso Spivey of Edenton.

Early American colonists used the milk in which blueberries had been boiled to paint their houses gray, not blue.
