Library Exhibits
St. Leon's Bouquet

Vaguely reminiscent of Williamsburg? Possibly. Dainty floral paintings in strong, bold colors? Definitely! What is it? Our latest and certainly one of the loveliest exhibits the library has had from the North Carolina State Museum of Arts in Raleigh. The exhibit, entitled "St. Leon Bouquet", is comprised of 19 untitled flower arrangements painted in watercolors sometime between 1830 and 1840 mostly by Helen Lockie Jones and her sister Mary. The nostalgic treatment and the tiny detailing enhance the paintings which were once collected together in a large leather bound book on which was inscribed in gold leaf "St. Leon's Bouquet."

The exhibit, which is part of the traveling exhibition program of the N. C. Museum of Art, will be here through October 28, so take part of your lunch hour (Yes! we are open during the entire day) and come feast your eyes and feel your love for beauty.

And while you're here, you can't fail to note our fascinating display of presidential medals which are currently in our display case through the courtesy of John A. Taylor. These large bronze medals depict the 37 presidents in various poses and costumes, and are truly lovely as well as instructive.

N. C. Political Figures Included in Carter Group

RALEIGH—George Wood of Camden, unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, is on the steering committee of the N. C. Carter Food and Agriculture Committee. Jim Graham, commissioner of agriculture, is chairman. Graham has said the farmers of North Carolina will have a friend in the White House if Jimmy Carter is elected president. "This election is vitally important to the financial health and well being of our family farmers and the many farm communities and business centers in North Carolina," said Graham.

"It's time we had a man up there in Washington who knows what it's like to work in the fields all day and I believe it's time we had a southerner in the White House, a man who knows about our problems," Graham continued.

"Jimmy Carter is the kind of man who will protect our tobacco and peanut programs in the years to come," according to Graham.

"The Ford Administration," he said, "is not sympathetic to the concept of the family farm. President Ford has vetoed every price support bill ever presented him."
