Clubs Seek Calendar Listings

The annual Community Birthday Calendar Campaign has begun and will continue to September 2 to raise funds for maintenance of Historic Edenton. This campaign is being conducted by Edenton's Business & Professional Women's Club, the Jaycees, Jaycettes, and the Edenton Woman's Club.

Through the efforts of members of these organizations going door-to-door in Edenton and Chowan County this campaign has been successful since its beginning in the mid-1950's, reported Mrs. Lueta Sellers, BPW Publicity chairman.

The Community Birthday Calendar includes birthdays and anniversaries of those persons buying listings. Through the compliments of radio station WCDJ these listings are announced each day. In addition, various businesses advertising on the calendar provide complimentary services to persons listed on their birthdays. This year the calendars are being sold for $1.25 and each birthday or anniversary listing is 25 cents. Any person interested may contact members of the organizations or the chairpersons.

This year Clara Boswell of Edenton BPW Club is the over-all chairperson of the campaign. The over-all chairmanship is rotated each year among the clubs. The chairman for the Jaycees is Michael Brown, Catherine Forehand for the Jaycettes, and Suzanne Palmer for the Women's Club.

Immunization Law Is Enforced

RALEIGH — About 10,000 North Carolina school children will start to school this fall not properly immunized if last year's trend continues, according to Frank Lewis, head of the state's Immunization Control Program.

The public health official said the immunization law is vigorously enforced in North Carolina and warned parents that only about four weeks remain before school starts in most counties. A copy of the immunization record is supposed to be presented to the teacher or principal on opening day of school for kindergarten and first grade pupils.

Lewis said North Carolina's immunization law has been amended for children entering kindergarten and first grade this fall to include one dose of rubella (German measles) vaccine. Heretofore, three doses of DPT (diphtheria, pertussis and tetanus), three of oral polio and one of red measles vaccine have been required.

In an effort to acquaint school officials with provisions of the state's immunization law, immunization personnel have visited about half of the state's 145 school districts this summer.

In urging compliance with the law, Lewis noted some 200 children were suspended last year for not being up to date on their shots. He said schools traditionally have had a problem with immunization records of children moving from one state to another. He cautioned that such children will be required to present their shot records beyond first grade and pressed parents to write for them, now.

Shots can be secured from private physicians or from county health departments.
