CROUP IS STILL AROUND

A child may wake up suddenly, breathing rapidly, with great difficulty and coughing frequently. If it's the more common type of croup, it's not usually dangerous and can be relieved by inhaling warm water vapor, either from a vaporizer or by steaming up the bathroom and letting the child sit in it for 15 to 20 minutes.

Another kind of croup is more dangerous. There already is a respiratory infection and a fever. But in addition, the child is lethargic, appears ill and does not respond at once to steaming. Your physician should then be called at once.
