A native of Edenton, he was born October 1, 1912, son of Mrs. Bessie Smith Lee, 139 East Church Street, and the late David Lee and was the husband of Mrs. Esther Long of New Rochelle.

In addition to his mother and wife, surviving are two sons: David Lee of New Rochelle; and George Lee, Jr., of the Bronx; a daughter, Mrs. Harriet Newton of New Rochelle; a brother, Richard M. Lee of Edenton; two sisters: Mrs. Betty Lee Hill of New Rochelle; and Janie M. Lee of Edenton; grandchildren and a host of other relatives.

Funeral services were held Saturday at 10 A.M. in Barney T. McClanahan Funeral Home with Rev. Richard Washington officiating. Burial was in Beechwoods Cemetery in New Rochelle.

SEEKS EYE DONORS—David Tesh, an employee of RJR Archer, Inc., spends his spare time talking to people about the importance of eye donor pledges. The donations are used in the corneal transplants, which can restore the gift of sight. One of the transplant recipients Tesh has met through his volunteer work is Stella Phelps.

Center Restores Sight For Many

WINSTON-SALEM — More than 240 North Carolinians who had lost their sight had it restored last year through the work of the N.C. Eye and Human Tissue Bank, Inc. This work is made possible partially through the efforts of dedicated volunteers, such as David Tesh.

A senior metals mechanic at RJR Archer, Inc., in Winston-Salem, Tesh spends much of his spare time soliciting "eye wills" or donor pledges. The pledge states that it is the donor's intent to have his or her eyes donated to the Eye-Bank at the time of death. The primary use for the eye donations is corneal transplants, which restore sight.

"When you talk to people who have received a corneal transplant and are able to see again, you realize that a donation might someday make someone happy for the rest of their life," says Tesh.

Tesh cites the example of a two-year-old boy who was born blind, but was able to see the candles on his birthday cake last year after a corneal transplant.

"I also know a 76-year-old lady who is one of the most active people I've ever met. She often says that she had the choice of receiving a corneal transplant or living the rest of her life as an old blind woman," Tesh continues.

Tesh got involved in the eye will program four years ago when he joined the Lions Club, in which the primary service function is helping the blind. Tesh is now chairman of a district which includes Davidson, Rowan, Cabarrus, Stanley, Union and Anson counties. He speaks to people about the eye donor program in shopping centers, colleges, and at civic meetings.

"Shortly before I attended my first Lions Club meeting, my father had died. Before his death, he had been practically blind. When I saw the Lions' program on eye donors, I realized that people — like my father — didn't necessarily have to remain blind. I saw how important it was for people to consider donating their eyes to this cause," he explains.

Tesh discusses common concerns about the Eye-Bank and eye will program with prospective donors. "Many people say they are unwilling to donate their eyes if there is a possibility that the eyes will be used for research. But I try to get those people to realize that, if there were no research, the restoration of sight would not be possible today."

Getting people to sign donor pledges is only half the battle involved in working on behalf of the Eye-Bank, Tesh says. "It's tragic that we lost many eyes that people intended to donate. A death in the family is such a traumatic experience that it may be days before the family remembers that the deceased wanted to donate his or her eyes. It's too late then, because the eyes must be removed within four hours after death, and must be transplanted within 24-36 hours. So it's important that anyone who wishes to make this donation notify his or her family, doctor and clergyman of that intention."

Anyone who wishes to sign a donor pledge can write to: The N.C. Eye and Human Tissue Bank, 3195 Maplewood Avenue, Winston-Salem, N.C. 27103.

The Eye-Bank is responsible for determining who the recipient will be when eyes become available, and for arranging transportation to the location where the eyes are needed. The Eye-Bank usually makes arrangements for a highway patrolman to take the donation to an airfield, where a pilot carries the shipment aboard the plane, flies it to its destination, and gives it to another patrolman waiting there. That patrolman then delivers it to the hospital where it is needed.
