

Students To Attend Governors School

Another exciting summer is in the offing for some 800 North Carolina high school students who will be attending one of the State's two Governor's Schools. The Governor's Schools offer a residential six-week program of study and enrichment in the performing arts and in academic subject areas for selected gifted high school juniors and seniors. The schools are located on the campuses of Salem College in Winston-Salem and St. Andrews College in Laurinburg.

Three students from Edenton-Chowan Schools have been recently notified of their selection to participate in this unique experience. Benita Ward, from Chowan High School, will be attending Governor's School - East at St. Andrews. She will pursue studies in the area of mathematics.

Two John A. Holmes High

School students were selected for this honor and will be attending the Governor's School - West at Salem College. Maria Jordan, who had to audition prior to being chosen, will participate in the Cultural Arts division of choral music. Eliot Atsupenas will participate in the academic division of social sciences.

The 1980 session will begin on June 29 and will end August 9. Students were randomly assigned to the East or West school according to an alphabetical and mathematical process to insure statewide representation at each school.

Students will live in college forms for their six-week stay and attend a comprehensive and challenging program of classes and events which are designed to stimulate creative thinking and offer advanced study in the performing arts and in academic areas.

Students will have opportunities for instruction from an outstanding faculty and for an exchange of ideas with their peers from across the State.

In addition to the classes offered, there will be lectures, recreational activities, field trips, intraschool athletics, concerts, dances, films, and talent shows for students to attend. Also, each school's student body will publish a student newspaper and yearbook.

The curriculum of the school is broken down into three main areas. Area I is the student's area of specialization which may be choral music, drama, dance, orchestra, arts, French, Spanish, English, math, social studies, or science.

Area II concerns philosophy and how knowledge is interrelated; Area III is the study of self and society.

Students were nominated by their superintendent of schools and private school headmaster. Each local school system may send at least two students.

Students had to meet State Criteria for gifted and talented in order to be selected.

After being nominated by the superintendent, the students went before an objective selection committee composed of a group of competent judges from across the State who are in no way connected with the Governor's Schools program.

The Governor's Schools are funded by state funds, with no charge to students, and are under the direction of the Division for Exceptional Children, State Department of Public Instruction.

PRESENTED PLAQUE—Senator Robert Morgan (D-NC) is presented a plaque for his contributions to education in a Washington ceremony. Making the presentation is Michael Renn, director of social studies in the Greensboro school system.

Active Sentence Given For Shoplifting Charge

A 59-year old Chowan County man was given a 90-day active sentence in Chowan County District Court, Tuesday, for shoplifting a roll of plastic tape.

Judge John T. Chaffin imposed the active term on C. W. Slades following testimony by the assistant manager of Roses store as well as another company employee who witnessed part of the incident.

According to Jane McCloud, a department head, Slades was seen removing the cardboard backing from a roll of Scotch tape. After being out of sight on another aisle, Slades was said to have been seen again empty handed.

Melvin Lane, asst. mgr., said he confronted Slades about the tape after the defendant paid for a box of rubber bands. Slades produced a roll of tape from inside his coat pocket that was cracked but otherwise unused, saying he had purchased and paid for it some time before Lane showed Slades a cardboard backing found by Mrs. McCloud behind a sheets display on the aisle that Slades walked down.

The defendant testified that as a tax form preparer he often carried tape to seal envelopes securely and that the roll in question had been picked up off the floor prior to coming to Edenton. He said he cracked it between two doors as he attempted to lock his house. Later, his wife corroborated his testimony that he had a roll in his pocket.

Entered as evidence by his attorney, Max S. Busby, was a piece of plastic Slades said fitted the cracked dispenser.

The fit wasn't good enough for Judge Chaffin, however, who found the defendant's story less convincing than the prosecutions evidence. A 1973 conviction for larceny also figured in the judge's decision for the active term, which was appealed under $400 bond

CAMA Training Courses To Be Held

Local Coastal Area Management Act permit officers will be learning more about CAMA permits in the next few weeks. Fifty-three officers from each of the 20 coastal counties and several coastal municipalities will attend training courses May 5-7 at the Marine Resources Center at Ft. Fisher or May 19-21 at the Marine Resources Center in Manteo.

The annual training sessions include studies of the estuarine and ocean hazard areas of environmental concern (AECs), changes in permit regulations, permit exempted construction and coastal management legislation and programs. CAMA permit officers issue the CAMA permits for most coastal development activities in the areas of environmental concern. Last year local permit officers issued 714 such permits.

The North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development's Office of Coastal Management sponsors the training courses. New officers are required to complete the training to be certified to administer the permit.
