

Local Schools Seek Parent Volunteers

Summer is over; the children are back in school; life is settling down to routine and hopefully there are parents and citizens who will step forward and offer their services of time and support to students, teachers and to education as school volunteers. School volunteers and parental involvement increasingly play a role in the academic achievement of students. An active volunteer recruitment is now underway in Edenton-Chowan Schools.

During its peak last year, the School Volunteer Program, noted Mary Rhea Gardner, community education director, boasted 70 lay persons, men and women, who gave at least one hour of time each week to a school of their choice. These public spirited citizens performed all sorts of duties and services in the classroom which relieved the regular teacher and allowed more time for individualized student instruction.

There are no special qualifications for being a school volunteer, other than a sincere interest in children, a desire to help, and a little free time. Volunteers can serve as resource people who have special interest or knowledge in a given area, such as plant growing, art, or stitching, who are willing to share. Volunteers lend individual attention to students by serving as math or reading teachers or simply listening to children read. Grading papers, supervising lunchroom or play ground activities and performing clerical activities are other broad general areas in which volunteers serve. They are an extra pair of helping hands to schools, students and teachers. They are needed!

All parents with children in school have been sent, by their children, forms to complete indicating their interest in volunteering. Parents are requested to complete these forms indicating area of interest, school and time to volunteer as soon as possible and return them to their child's school.

Community citizens willing to volunteer are also urged to contact Mrs. Gardner at 482-4436 to express their interest. Volunteer training sessions have been planned for September 17 - 19.

Although all schools appreciate, need and welcome volunteers, Chowan Junior High School is beginning a new program this year, the success of which will greatly depend on community resource people. A new enrichment period has been designed and initiated into the school's curriculum, which will daily offer a variety of special interest activities to seventh and eighth grade students.

Students will participate in an "interest group" of their choice for a three week period, before changing to another "interest group" each three weeks following.

During the first three weeks, furniture refinishing, self-defense, games, table tennis, cosmetics, babysitting, T.V. analysis, plant growing and cake decorating will be offered. Other "interest groups", being taught, all of which resulted from students selection, are horseshoes, balance beam, cross-stitch, archery, quilting and hair styling.

Anyone who is proficient in and enjoys any of these areas and is willing to help a teacher instruct students is also requested to contact

Mrs. Gardner at 482-4436 or Mary Nixon at 221-4131. These volunteers would serve as resource people to the regular classroom teacher.
