

Weyerhaeuser Co. Wins Recognition

Weyerhaeuser Company's North Carolina Region Resource Group has been recognized for having the best timberlands division safety record in the entire U. S. forest products industry.

The National Safety Council recognized the group for its safe operating record over a three-year period from 1978 - 1980, and the N. C. Department of Labor presented its annual Safety Award for the third consecutive year covering the same period.

The three-year period involved more than 3.5 million manhours. The Resource Group, which employs more than 550 people, is responsible for all company logging, wood raw materials procurement, timberlands equipment maintenance and management of Weyerhaeuser's 600,000 acres of timberland in North Carolina.

"We are extremely proud of this recognition of the attitude and commitment of our employees toward working safely, as well as of our safety program. Safety is foremost in our daily operations. Due to the nature of the work, we plan to continue the highest emphasis possible on safety," said Robert M. Wiggins, Region Resource Group manager for the company.

The work performed by timberlands operations in the forest products industry is considered to have a higher element of risk than many other occupations.

Logging, for instance, involves felling trees with chainsaws and feller-bunchers; hauling the downed trees to logging decks with grapple skidders, usually over rough terrain; trimming limbs and tops; loading logs on trucks trailers or operating whole-tree chippers; and driving log trucks to and from mills and plants.

Other timberlands management includes the operation of many types of heavy equipment for roadbuilding, forestry site preparation, and pre-commercial and commercial forest thinning. Employees also are often called on the fight forest fires.

Business Level Is Increasing

The level of business activity in North Carolina moved upward in October, according to the Wachovia Business Index. The Index registered 154.2, up 0.4 per cent from the revised September level.

Gains in services employment and other areas of non-manufacturing enabled the overall North Carolina economy to resist national trends. However, employment in the state's manufacturing sector dropped slightly, reflecting the decline experienced nationally.

In October in the non-manufacturing sector, employment was up 0.7 per cent, primarily due to employment gains in contract construction and services. Trade and government employment also increased.

Employment in the manufacturing sector declined in both durable and non-durable goods industries during October. Price-adjusted average hourly earnings for manufacturing employees remained virtually unchanged from September, while the average manufacturing workweek rose 0.2 per cent.

The seasonally adjusted unemployment rate for North Carolina was 6.1 per cent in October, up 0.1 per cent from the September level. The national rate for October, was 8 per cent, up 0.5 per cent from September. The unadjusted unemployment rate in North Carolina was 5.6 per cent in October.

Unit sales of cars through the first ten months of 1981 increased 1 per cent over the same period of 1980. Truck sales were 2.1 per cent below 1980 levels.
