

Father's Day

Our prayers and very special wishes go out to all fathers on their special day June 20th.

Men who are the longest remembered, and whose memories are most highly revered, are not those that make the most money; but those whose hearts were gentle, whose sympathies were broad, and who best served humanity.

Dear Dad,

What shall you give to one small boy?

A glamorous game, a tinselled toy,

A barlow knife, a puzzle pack,
A train that runs on a curving track?

A picture book, a real live pet.
No, there's plenty of time for such things yet.

Give him a day of his very own.
Just one small boy and his dad alone.

A walk in the woods, a romp in the park,

A fishing trip from dawn to dark,

Give the gift that only you can.
The companionship of his father.

Games are outgrown, and toys decay.

But he'll never forget if you Give him a day.

Four Step Plan Is Approved

RALEIGH—CF Industries and the Division of Environmental Management have agreed on a four-step program to reduce the flow of nitrogen into the Chowan River at Tunis.

The company and the division have been negotiating since March 11, when the Environmental Management Commission denied a request by state officials for an order requiring CF to take steps to clean up the river.

"Our agreement on these four basic, vital actions is a significant step toward control of one source of nutrients in the river," said Joseph Grimsley, secretary of the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

CF officials would not comment on the agreement.

In 1979, the state determined that CF's fertilizer operation contributed 3 per cent on the nitrogen pollution found in the Chowan. The presence of nitrogen was blamed for periodic algae blooms that have fouled the river since 1972.

Most of the nitrogen pollution was found to come from municipalities in the Chowan River basin and from farm fertilizer runoff. Three-fourths of the pollution came from farms, towns and plants in Virginia.

The division and CF have agreed that:

Specific locations will be set for placement of automatic samplers in the river upstream and downstream from the plant. State personnel will operate these samplers. CF agreed to review its flow calculation procedures.

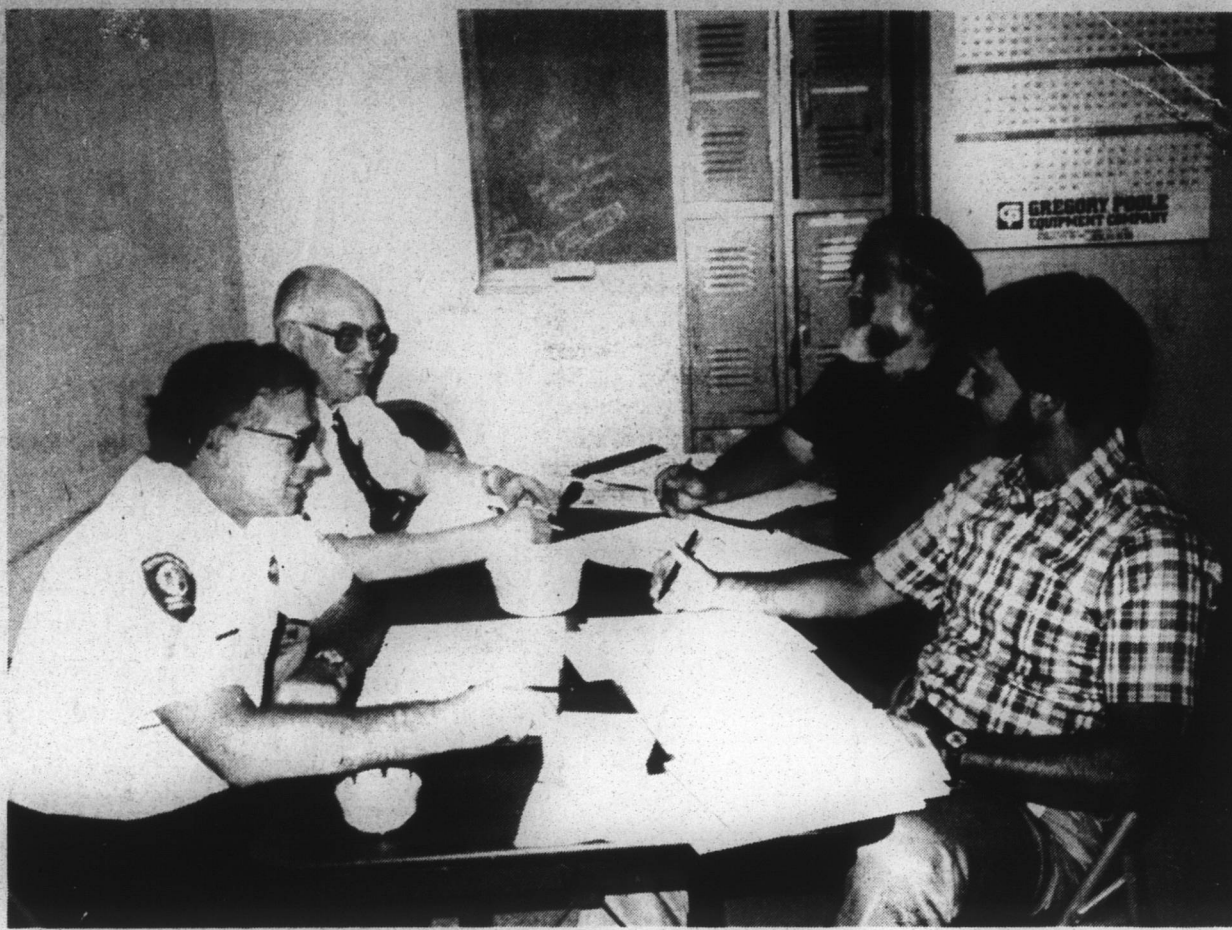

The company will provide a material balance study of all significant nitrogen air emissions.

The company will evaluate the east ditch drainage area that flows through a flood plain, provide the state with previous monitoring data from the east ditch and work with the state on monitoring the area.

The company will consider redirecting storm water drainage away from the west side of its property. The state believes that would reduce the amount of nitrogen flushed into the river.

The environmental division fined CF $2,000 in November for violating its water quality permit by allowing too much nitrogen into the river.

Since its struggle with the state began, CF has spent $1 million building an underground containment wall to prevent nitrogen-tainted groundwater from seeping into the river, pumped drainage water away from the river, and planted soybeans to minimize rainwater runoff into the river.

Mrs. Graham Is Named Committee Chairman

Gov. Jim Hunt has appointed Dorothy C. Graham of Edenton as chairman of the Chowan County Committee for America's Four Hundredth Anniversary.

Mrs. Graham, widow of the late John W. Graham, is a graduate of Stanford University in California. She is active in a number of historical and community service organizations, including the Democratic Woman's Club, the Edenton Woman's Club and St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Mrs. Graham has the power to appoint three members to the local committee for the Four Hundredth Anniversary. The chairman of the county commissioners or his representative will also have a seat, and three appointees will be made by America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee (AFHAC), the arm of the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources responsible for coordinating celebrations of the quadricentennial of the Roanoke Voyages of 1584 - 87.

The Roanoke Voyages, sponsored by Sir Walter Raleigh, were the first English attempts to settle

North America. Probably the most famous of the Voyages is the mysterious "Lost Colony" of 1587, but several earlier expeditions also reached the shores of Roanoke Island on the Outer Banks.

"Appointment of these county chairmen marks a very, very big step in planning for an exciting commemoration," according to John Neville, executive secretary of AFHAC.

"Our AFHAC chairman, Lindsay Warren of Goldsboro, is determined that this commemoration will involve every North Carolinian in every part of the state. Local leaders will be able to give us enormous help in reaching everyone interested in North Carolina's history."

The chairmen met with Governor Hunt and AFHAC members May 25 in Raleigh. They received guidebooks and extensive suggestions on local involvement and heard details about commemorative projects already underway.

The first official project will be a visit in April of 1984 by an American delegation to Plymouth, England, from which Philip Amadas' Roanoke expedition set sail 400 years earlier. An English delegation is due in Manteo in July of 1984, the quadricentennial of the landing of that expedition.

That date is also scheduled for the christening of a sailing ship built in the style of the 16th century, a project already underway under the direction of the American Quadricentennial Corporation.

Plans for the ship, to be named the Elizabeth II, are complete, and construction is scheduled to begin sometime this summer in Manteo. The ship will be berthed permanently in Manteo, but it will be able to sail to other ports in North Carolina.

Also a key part of the commemoration is a joint exhibition with the British Library featuring documents and artifacts concerning Sir Walter Raleigh, the power behind the "Roanoke Voyages," and the entire Elizabethan era. The beautiful drawings of Indians done by John White, governor of "The Lost Colony," will also be included.

The exhibition will open in England in the spring of 1984 and travel to the N.C. Museum of History in Raleigh in early 1985.

Archaeologists are already working on another aspect of the commemoration, the search for remains of the "Lost Colony."

Private citizens and organizations are working on several other projects, including a British-American Festival of arts and folklife, an Elizabethan Festival at Roanoke Island's

Chowan Detention Facility To Participate In Pilot Program

by Richard Williams

Two instructors from Appalachian State University are spearheading a study to upgrade jail systems in the state of North Carolina.

Chowan County Sheriff's Department and Detention Center has been selected as one of only three counties in North Carolina to be a part of the Pilot Implementation Study to compose a policy and procedure manual.

"We selected this facility because Sheriff (Troy) Toppin and (County Manager) Cliff Copeland have demonstrated a willingness to work with us," said Gary Willis, who has taught criminal justice for thirteen years at Appalachian State University.

"Also because it is a modern and small jail," said Dr. Joe Thompson, instructor of political science at A.S.U.

Chowan County will have the first policy and procedure manual. The two instructors are assisting Toppin and Detention Center Chief Walter Linhardt to start their own and other counties will use it as a model to start their own.

Executive Director of the Sheriff Association predict fifty to seventy-five of the counties will adopt the model.

The manual will have a three-fold purpose defined by Willis 1. "to standardize jail operations, 2. to prevent law suits and successfully defend them if any do occur and 3. to upgrade the quality of service rendered to persons incarcerated."

This is the second attempt to develop such a manual. The first attempt failed because "there was not enough support from the officials in the criminal justice system," Willis said. "But the need is extensive."

In 1979, the Comprehensive Crime Report issued by Governor's Crime Commission stated, "We believe it absolutely essential that local and state law enforcement agencies develop adequate policy and procedure manuals."

The impetus for the present project was provided by a request from Sheriff R.L. Thomas of Carteret County to the GCC to develop a policy and procedure manual for North Carolina's jail. As a result of his request, a jail technical assistance group was established in January, 1981, to begin work on the development of an outline for a policy and procedure manual.

Work on the manual is expected to be completed in all N.C. counties by August, according to Willis.

John Dowd

Dowd Addresses Graduating Class

Sunday evening John A. Holmes High School held its annual commencement exercises in Hicks Field. Diplomas were awarded to one hundred sixty-five students.

John Dowd of Dowd Insurance and Real Estate was the guest speaker for the event. An instructor at the school for eight years, Dowd informed the audience of his graduation day fifteen years ago, in his address.

"In high school I saw myself as just an average kid," he said, but that is not a lot to be proud of -- being just average."

He informed the audience of the importance of setting goals. "If you don't set goals, how will you know if you've succeeded," said Dowd, who served as assistant football coach at Holmes in 1979.

Dowd graduated from East Carolina University in 1971 with a B.S. in Business Administration. Earlier this year he was named as an Honorary Life Member of North Carolina DECA.

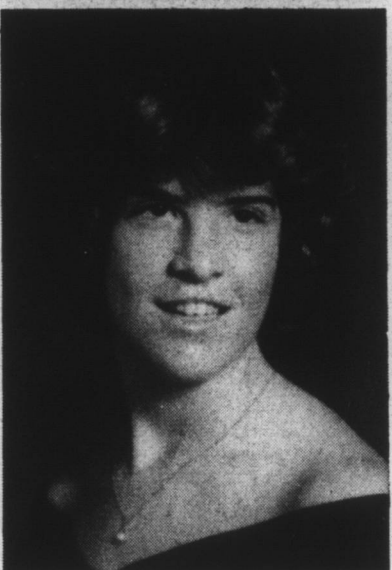

Mrs. Kay Cherry, senior class advisor, said Dowd's speech was "one of the best that she can remember ever."

Marion Jones was the valedictorian. Salutatorians were Harriet Abbe, Anna Goodwin, Deneen Roberts and Barbara Wright.

There were eighteen honor graduates. They include: Harriet Abbe, Suanne Bass, Al Bunch, Sheila Cherry, Paula Dunlowe, Arlene Evans, Anna Goodwin, Mary Hollowell, Valerie Jerkins, Marion Jones, Connie Lane, Kim Maglione, Deneen Roberts, Darryl Stallings, Kim Swanner, Sara Twine, Debbie Ward and Bill Whichard.

Advisors to the senior class were Lee Bass, Gloria Bryant, Kay Cherry, Hugh Dial, Peggy Harmon, Nelia Lane, Lois Lassiter and Harriet Small.

What were the feelings of this year's graduating class? Graduating senior Thomas White expressed it best, "Free at last! Free at last!"

Miss Jones, Miss Roberts Are Alumni Scholarship Recipients

Marion Jones and Karen Roberts, valedictorian and salutatorian respectively of the class of '82 at John A. Holmes High School, have been selected by the faculty of East Carolina University to receive an Alumni Honor Scholarship for 1982. These scholarships recognize the most academically outstanding freshmen each year. The Alumni Honor Scholarship is the most prestigious academic award offered to new freshmen at East Carolina University and are renewable for a four-year period, contingent on students maintaining a 3.0 grade point average.

The Alumni Honor Scholarships were presented to Marion and Karen at the Awards Day program at John A. Holmes by Mr. Ron Brown representing East Carolina University. These scholarships helped to make up a total of over $31,000 awarded to students at John A. Holmes High School.

Chowan Hospital Receives Certification

RALEIGH — The N.C. Voluntary Effort (VE) has announced the names of the state's acute care hospitals including Chowan Hospital in Edenton, which have been certified in recognition of their successful completion of the criteria for this cost containment program.

In congratulating certified institutions, Dr. Edward L. Walls, Jr., professor of business at UNC-Charlotte, and chairman of the state Steering Committee for Health Care Cost Containment, stated "We are pleased that this program has been so well received by the hospitals of North Carolina.

It remains among the few state level activities firmly committed to reducing health care costs."

The N.C. Voluntary Effort this year introduced a complex budget analysis program, permitting each participating hospital to compare its performance with other institutions in its peer group. Additionally, hospitals were required to operate cost awareness programs that called for multi-disciplinary cost containment committees, the sending of copies of patients' hospital bills to their physicians and to hospital boards of trustees, and the posting of hospital charges for members of medical staffs.
