Farm Families

Every American farm and every American family has a stake in international trade. Farm produce from two of every five acres in U.S. agriculture is sold abroad. More than 20 per cent of U.S. industrial production is exported. One of every six jobs in the U.S. manufacturing sector is created by exports. Almost one of every three dollars of U.S. corporate profit is created by exports.

While the facts and figures should prove the value of free and open trade between nations, there are certain factors which serve to restrict U.S. exports to its two largest farm markets, the European Community and Japan.

Recent trade missions by Farm Bureau leaders provided a unique opportunity for U.S. farmers to speak person-to-person to leaders in both the private and public sectors on their

"Korn In The West"

Weather Can't Stop This Performance

It is not a pleasant evening in Boone. The clouds look threatening and there is a mist in the air - obviously the local outdoor drama Horn In The West will not be playing tonight - or will it?

More than likely it will, although not too many folks will be there to see it. The rain policy, according to Marketing Manager Terry Hamilton, is simple: "A lot of people have come a long way to see the show, and we aren't going to let them be disappointed if we can possibly help it. If it actually rains hard enough to force us to stop, we will ask the audience to retire to the rain shelter for a brief waiting period. Usually, we can get started again after a few minutes. It rarely ever rains enough to cause us to cancel the performance."

In fact, the HORN has only lost one - and - one - half performances to date this season, despite the incredible amount of rain that has fallen in the Boone area this year.

Once a ticket - holder goes through the gate and has his ticket torn, no refund can be made, but should adverse weather occur, a rain check is issued that is good forever. "We have honored rain checks that were 13 years old," said General Manager William R. Winkler, III.

"Our cast and crew are the best", continued Winkler. "They understand that if there are people in the theatre who came to see them perform, then we owe them the very best show even if it means getting a little wet."

The HORN plays nightly except Mondays through August 14 in the Daniel Boone Theatre in Boone. And if it looks like rain, don't worry. The show must go on - and it will.

Summer Heat

RALEIGH - Hot summer weather is a potential health hazard for the elderly. Heat can place a dangerous strain on the older body, especially the heart. Older adults are very vulnerable to heat stroke, which can be fatal.

Elderly citizens most vulnerable to heat related problems, are those with a weak or damaged heart, hypertension, diabetes, circulation problems, excess weight, or those who have suffered a stroke. Other factors that affect a person's reaction to heat are infection or fever, diarrhea, drinking, and skin diseases or sunburn which may reduce sweating that helps cool the body.
